152 BEER SALOONS GRANTED LICENSES MONDAY AFTERNOON

Marion Jackson Appears Before General Council to Voice Protest Against Police Committee Action.

VOTE ON LOCKER CLUBS COMES NEXT MONDAY

Some Objection to Their Operation Made at Meeting—Some Operated for Profit, Says Johnson.

Near beer saloons won out in general council Monday when 152 applications for renewals of licenses were granted with only four dissenting votes. A fight on locker clubs was started with the result that all of the twenty applications for renewals were laid on the table until an adjourned session of council next Monday afternoon, when each application will be considered separately.

Marion Jackson headed a delegation of members of the Men and Religion Forward Movement who appeared before council to protest against passing favorably on the applications approved by the police committee. Mr. Jackson spoke thirty minutes against them and urged consideration of a resolution passed by a mass meeting of men Sunday afternoon urging council to turn down the applications.

"You men know enough of the moral side of this question, so I will not discuss that feature,' said Mr. Jackson. "We have sought for two years to keep from enjoining these clubs and saloons, as we have a right by law to do, because we wanted it to go out to the world that the city officials had taken action against them and not a citizens' committee."

Hold Revenue Licenses.

Mr. Jackson declared that since many of those asking renewal of their licenses held internal revenue licenses, it was a prima facie evidence that they were selling whisky and that he knew some of the institutions were being operated for profit.

He denied that the Men and Religion organization had ever employed detectives to visit and inspect the social clubs. He said they were unnecessary to obtain the evidence.

Chairman Edwin Johnson, of the police committee, stated that the committee in making up its report had visited all of the locker clubs and saloons and found them operating in an orderly manner and above criticism.

"Some of the clubs, I am frank to state, are in my opinion not operated in accordance with the law," said Chairman Johnson. "I believe some of them operate for profit."

Councilman Orville Hall asked Chairman Johnson what clubs were operated for profit and which were violating the laws.

"I hold no brief for the locker-clubs of Atlanta, but I will say that if I had been convinced in my own mind that I had evidence that would convict I would have voted adversely on the applications before bringing them before council," answered Chairman Johnson. "There was plenty of opportunity to judge of the character of the places and at the same time not have positive evidence against them."

Action Is Deferred.

On motion of Alderman Thomson council deferred action on the locker club applications, and an inspection will be made of the list of questions answered under oath by the applicants and filed with the police committee.

When the question of adopting the report of the committee giving permits to 152 near beer saloons was taken only four votes were recorded against them. They were, Councilman J. L. McCord, Councilman C. W. Smith, Councilman J. C. White, of the seventh, and Councilman A. T. Peacock.

When the applications of fifty-two pool room operators, all favorably reported by the police committee, were submitted, Chairman Johnson was asked if any of them were being operated in connection with near beer saloons. He replied that some of them were being operated jointly, but they were not so marked.

On motion, council decided to defer action on pool room licenses until the adjourned meeting, and in the meantime a report will be framed showing which are operated in connection with near beer saloons.

At this juncture Councilman J. C. White submitted an ordinance making it unlawful for pool rooms to be operated in connection with near beer saloons.

Woodward Opposes.

The ordinance was referred to the ordinance committee of council for report. Mayor Woodward came to its support, operating them jointly, and is expected to veto any permits granted to such applicants.

Council passed a resolution by Alderman I. N. Ragsdale providing for a charter amendment to make the manager of the waterworks department elective by general council instead of by the people as now obtains. Councilman Claude Ashley opposed the passage of the resolution claiming the people should be given an opportunity to express their views on the proposed change.

Another step in the program of adjustment of salaries of public school teachers was taken when council adopted an ordinance repealing a portion of an ordinance passed in December, 1913, empowering council to fix the salaries of the employees in the police, fire and public school departments. The ordinance provides that that section affecting teachers shall be repealed and that the board of education shall fix their salaries.

An ordinance by Councilman Sim Dallas repealing an ordinance recently passed forcing the street railway company to lay concrete foundations under all their tracks was lost. Council voted to force the company to lay concrete under all tracks instead of using ballast as formerly.

No Action on Teachers.

The resolution recently passed by the board of education calling for a general readjustment of teachers' salaries

GRANDSIRE CLAUSE DECLARED INVALID

U. S. Supreme Court Knocks Out Legislation by Southern States to Get Rid of the Negro Vote.

Washington, June 21.—In probably one of the most important race decisions in its history the supreme court today annuled as unconstitutional the Oklahoma constitutional amendment and the Annapolis, Md., voters' qualification law restricting the suffrage rights of those who could not vote or whose ancestors could not vote prior to the ratification of the fifteenth amendment to the federal constitution.

Chief Justice White, a native of the south and a former confederate soldier, announced the court's decision, which was unanimous except that Justice McReynolds took no part in the case.

Invalidates Much Legislation.

By holding that conditions that existed before the fifteenth amendment, which provides that the right to vote shall not be denied or abridged on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude could not be brought over to the present day in disregard of this self-executing amendment, it is generally believed that the court went a long way toward invalidating much of the so-called "grandfather clause" legislation of southern states.

The immediate effect of the court's decision was to uphold the conviction of two Oklahoma election officials who denied negroes the right to vote in a congressional election, and to award three Maryland negroes damages from election officials in Annapolis who refused to register them. The court held that these election officials could not ignore the potency of the fifteenth amendment in wiping out of state constitutions the word "white" as a qualification for voting. In the Maryland case the court's decision established the point that the fifteenth amendment applies alike to municipal as well as to federal elections.

Views of Justice White.

Discussing the Oklahoma cases, Chief Justice White said the suffrage amendment to the state constitution first fixed a literacy standard, and

CONVICTS ENRAGED BY THE BREAKING OF HONOR SYSTEM

Joliet, Ill., June 21.—Fearing a repetition of the demonstration by 1,600 convicts against Joe Campbell and Walter Edwards, negro convicts suspected of slaying the wife of Edmund Allen, warden of the state penitentiary here, prison officials saw that each convict was locked in his cell tonight and special pains were taken to prevent any outbreak. Even the trusties were locked up, for the first time in the history of the prison.

In spite of the watchfulness of the day guards, 1,300 convicts rose in the main dining hall at midday dinner and shouted threats against Campbell, the only suspect. One hundred guards rushed the convicts, and with clubs quieted the uproar. Tonight there was suppressed excitement in the prison and old guards said the whisper had gone from cell to cell to punish the negroes whose alleged crime jeopardized the prisoners' honor system.

The coroner's inquest into the death of Mrs. Allen, a former light opera singer, whose charred body was found yesterday after a fire had destroyed the bed in which she slept in the warden's apartment in the prison occupied most of the day, and will be continued tomorrow.

Mrs. Allen, before her marriage five years ago, was Miss Odette Marie Bordeaux, a comic opera favorite and a member of the original "Merry Widow" company. She took an active part in the affairs of the prison and her influence did much towards establishing the honor system.

Captain P. D. Clarkson, a guard, testified that Campbell, a house servant, and Edwards, a trusty, who served as the Allens' waiter, had bought and exchanged clothes immediately after the fire. Michael Kane, a guard, testified he had come upon Campbell dressing in an ante-room of Mrs. Allens' apartments soon after the body was found.

ATTORNEY FOR BECKER SEES WHITMAN TODAY

Albany, N. Y., June 21.—Martin T. Manton, attorney for Charles Becker under death sentence for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, will confer with Governor Whitman here tomorrow.

At the executive chamber it was said the meeting would be in the nature of a private "lawyers' talk." It is thought Manton will appear before the governor later and make a public plea for the life of his client. Mrs. Becker is expected to appear at the later hearing.

FIVE MEN ARE TO DIE ON MISSISSIPPI GALLOWS

Jackson, Miss., June 21.—Five death sentences were affirmed by the Mississippi supreme court today, and in each case August 6 was named as the date for execution. S. J. Johnson convicted for the murder of A. E. Brewer, in Warren county two years ago, and J. Tabor, convicted for the murder of his daughter-in-law, are white men. The other three are negroes, convicted for the murder of others of their own race.

BLOCKADE IS DENOUNCED BY AMERICAN IMPORTERS

New York, June 21.—One hundred importers of goods from German and Austria met here today and passed a resolution, which it was announced, would be presented to President Wilson, protesting against interference by belligerent nations with "non-contraband goods shipped from neutral ports in neutral vessels to ports of the United States."

Importers recently began a movement of protest against the British order-in-council as it affects the trade of this country.

GERMAN SPECIALIST CARES FOR SULTAN

Professor Israel is the sultan's guest at the Yildis Kiosk, where he will remain until the end of next week. The nature of the Turkish ruler's ailment has not been disclosed.

TEUTONS DRAWING THEIR NET CLOSER AROUND LEMBERG

Berlin and Vienna Reports Indicate That the Russians Will Be Forced to Evacuate Galician Capital.

SITUATION OF RUSSIANS REPORTED PRECARIOUS

Line of Retreat Said to Have Been Cut by the Austro-Germans — French Claim to Be Gaining in the West.

London, June 21.—The Austro-German net appears to be drawing closer and closer to Lemberg. Already its meshes are about it on the northern, western and southern fronts, and with the Russians reported almost everywhere in retreat, General von Mackensen's promise to recapture the city before July 1 may be fulfilled.

Rawka, 30 miles northwest; Solkiew, 18 miles north, and territory along the Skemierek rivulet, a short distance south of Lemberg, have been occupied by the Teutonic allies, while other forces west of the capital are near the city limits.

RUSSIANS RETREAT.

Farther south, along the southern banks of the Dniester, Grand Duke Nicholas has ordered the Russians to retreat and north of the Bukowina frontier Vienna says the Teutons have repulsed strong Russian attacks and inflicted heavy casualties. According to the latest news from the Austrian headquarters, the Teutonic allies are now within nine miles of the limits of Lemberg.

Wonder is expressed by German military critics over the Austro-German advance of the last few days. They had expected the Russians to make a firm stand along the Grodek line. Instead, however, Grand Duke Nicholas, the Russian commander-in-chief, not only retired quickly from this position, but evidently recognizing his dangerous predicament, also ordered the withdrawal of the Russian forces from south of the Dniester river.

FRENCH GAIN IN THE WEST.

In the west Paris continues to report French advances, especially in the region of Arras. Here it is asserted progress has been made in the direction of Souchez and the capture of several trenches has brought the attackers near the northwest of the village. Further progress also is reported in the Lorraine district and in the Vosges. Here the French claim an advance beyond the cemetery at Metzeral, the loss of which town is not now officially admitted by Berlin.

At one point the French line was bent under a heavy bombardment, in which asphyxiating projectiles were used. This was on the western border of the Argonne, and two companies of Frenchmen were buried in the overturned trenches. Paris declared, however, that a counter attack enabled the French troops to regain almost the entire extent of their initial positions.

GENERAL ATTACK ON THE RUSSIANS.

HORROR EXPRESSED BY POPE BENEDICT AT SOME WAR ACTS

The Holy Father Says That He Does Not Know of More Frightful Deed Than Sinking of Lusitania.

HE IS ALSO DISTRESSED BY THE ALLIED BLOCKADE

The Pope Tells of the Troubles He Has Had to Face Since the Conflict Began. Declares Vatican Must Be Neutral.

Paris, June 21.—La Liberte publishes today an interview with Pope Benedict, signed by Louis Latapie, a prominent member of the staff who was sent to Rome for the purpose of ascertaining the pope's views on the various aspects of the European war. Pope Benedict is quoted as expressing horror at some of the developments of the war, but in the main the words of the pope have to do with peace.

The interview began with an allusion by the pontiff to what the holy see had done in respect to the war. The pontiff has addressed a letter in favor of peace to the Catholic world. He had proposed a truce to the belligerents for the Christmastide. He had endeavored to obtain an exchange of prisoners unfitted for military service and had had the good fortune to obtain in this respect an appreciable result.

His holiness referred to the letter he had written to Cardinals Lucon and Amette, of Rheims and Paris respectively, and to his consistorial address on January 22.

What the Pope Said.

M. Latapie quotes the pope as saying:

"You desire that I should condemn every crime specifically, but each one of your questions is accompanied by a reply on the part of the Germans and I am not able to institute here a continuous discussion, nor can I make investigations at this moment.

"Is it necessary to inquire as to whether the neutrality of Belgium has been violated?" asked the correspondents.

"That was under the pontificate of Pius X," the pope replied.

"Is it true," he was told, "that many priests have been taken as hostages in Belgium and in France and shot?"

The pope replied: "I do not know from Austrian bishops the assurance that the Russian army also has taken hostages from among the Catholic priests, and that Russians on one occasion pushed before them 1,500 Jews, so that they could advance behind this living barrier this exposed to bullets of the enemy. The bishop of Cremona has informed me that the Italians already have taken eighteen austrian priests as hostages.

So Many Excesses.

"There are so many excesses that I have issued an admonition in my encyclical, saying: 'It is permitted to no person, for whatever motive, to violate justice.'"

"The Germans," said M. Latapie, "have committed other violations."

To this the pope replied: "The cardinal-secretary of state has received the representatives of seven Belgian congregations. They have declared that they are not able to cite a single case in their congregations protected especially by the Virgin or by some saint. We continue to be imperfectly informed upon this subject."

"And the burning of Louvain and the bombardments of churches?"

"The Germans reply that their troops have been fired upon," the pope replied. "They have declared there was an observatory in the tower of the cathedral at Rheims. With reference to Louvain, I already have given orders concerning all that the Germans on entering the cathedrals. Is there need to say that we condemn with all our force such acts? Have we not cried out upon the cathedral of Rheims was felt in my heart."

Pope Strikes Breast.

The pope struck his breast, and added: "But the hour has not yet come to disentangle the truth from all the contradictory assertions which surround it. The vatican is not a court. We do not give judgment, for the judge is on high."

"At least one can protest against the arrest of a prince of the church," ventured the correspondent.

"I shall surprise you: Cardinal Mercier (archbishop of Malines), has never been arrested," replied the pope. "He can go about his diocese as he pleases. I have received from General von Bissing, governor of Belgium, a letter assuring me that he would repress hereafter with the utmost energy all acts of violence against churches and against the ministers of God."

The Sinking of the Lusitania.

The pope then referred to the sinking of the Lusitania, and is quoted by the correspondent as saying:

"I do not know of a more frightful transaction. What grief to see our generation the prey of such horrors! I have the heart of a father, and this heart has been torn. But what do you think of the blockade which constricts two empires, which condemns to famine millions of innocents? It is inspired also by feelings entirely human."

The pope continued: "I do not say that after the war I will not proclaim a syllabus, recalling and summing up the doctrines of the church on this subject and regulating for the future the rights and duties of belligerents. Then one will find without doubt the formal condemnation of many which will have been committed during the war."

It was pointed out to the pontiff that France regretted to see that the pope had endeavored to prevent Italy from participating in the war, and the question was asked if this were not favoring the plans of German diplomacy.

"I recognize clearly that we are neutral," the pontiff replied. "We have given instructions along this line. We wanted peace, first, because I am the representative of God on earth. God wishes that there be peace among men. A pope can want and preach only peace, and, furthermore, because we are in Italy and we wanted to have this coun-

Frank Starts Prison Work; Noisy Crowd at Governor's Home Dispersed by Militia

Solicitor General Hugh Dorsey Issues Statement in Which He Says That He Believed That Slaton Was Disqualified to Pass Upon the Case and Declares He Cannot Find in His Statement Single Reason Why Sentence Should Have Been Commuted.

"I DID MY DUTY," STATES THE GOVERNOR; "INNOCENCE WILL BE PROVED"—FRANK

Major I. T. Catron and Lieutenant Arnold Parker Injured by Missiles Thrown by Members of the Crowd at the Governor's Home—Many Arrests Made by Police During the Day—Slaton Hanged in Effigy in Two Cities Monday.

Atlanta passed one of the most exciting days in her history Monday following the exclusive announcement in The Constitution that the sentence of Leo M. Frank had been commuted by Governor John M. Slaton. Some of the most important developments of the day and night follow:

Crowd estimated at 1,200 people marched last night to home of Governor John M. Slaton, near Buckhead, creating considerable disturbance on the way. They were met by battalion of the Fifth regiment, which quickly dispersed the crowd.

During the night Lieutenant Arnold Parker was injured by brick; Major I. T. Catron was struck by bottle; one member of crowd was hit over head with automatic, and several prisoners taken. Many arrests made by police during day.

Mass meeting held Monday afternoon in senate chamber. Sheriff Mangum makes address, telling of his trip with Frank to prison farm.

Frank arrives in Milledgeville and gives out statement, in which he expresses his thanks to governor and asserts his innocence will eventually be proved.

Solicitor Dorsey gives out statement, in which he scores action of governor in commuting sentence.

Governor Slaton gives out statement, in which he analyzes case and tells why he commuted Frank's sentence. "I am confident I did right," he says.

Governor Slaton and Frank burned in effigy in Newnan; governor hanged in effigy in Marietta and Woodstock; Valdosta starts fund for monument to Mary Phagan.

Developments came thick and fast yesterday following the departure of Leo M. Frank to Milledgeville to begin serving a life sentence there.

The prisoner left Atlanta, accompanied by Sheriff Mangum and a number of deputies, at 12:01 o'clock. The party reached Macon shortly before 3 o'clock, there secured an automobile and by 5 o'clock Frank was an inmate of the state prison farm at Milledgeville.

Shortly after being admitted reporters were permitted to see him.

His appearance spoke clearly the tremendous strain through which he had gone. Upon being asked whether he had anything to say, he said in clear and composed language: "I am grateful beyond words to the governor for the way he has disposed of the case. I felt confident all the while that it would turn out as it has. Somehow I just felt confident that I would not hang. Of course, I am unsettled, as you see, from the tremendous nerve-racking experience through which I have been drawn, especially during the last trying hours of this ordeal. No person can know what I have gone through.

Believes Innocence Will Be Proved.

"And I am not composed enough at this time to give you an intelligent and connected conversation. Just say that I feel more than I can express in words, and am happy that my life is saved. Time will prove, as I have often told you, the fact of my absolute innocence of the murder with which I am charged.

"I felt in my heart all the time a secret assurance that I should not hang." And with a firm look directly in the face of the interviewer, he paused briefly and added, "I am innocent."

"I had begun to think I wouldn't get to see this place," was the significant remark made by Frank to Warden Smith, just after his arrival with Sheriff Mangum at 4:55 o'clock.

Both Frank and the sheriff appeared very nervous when they reached the prison, and the sheriff heaved a sigh of relief as he delivered his charge to the penitentiary officials. The strain of the trip down from Atlanta had told on both. The sheriff remained here but a few minutes, returning to Macon in the automobile in which he had made the hurried trip out.

Frank was first registered and then dressed in his suit of stripes, after which he was taken to the bunkroom of the main building for a bit of rest before being given his breakfast. Strict orders were issued to permit no one to see him, except on specific order from the prison commission in Atlanta. Also Superintendent J. M. Burke and Warden Smith were instructed by the prison commission to immediately double the force of guards at the prison.

DORSEY'S STATEMENT.

Averring that he considered Governor John M. Slaton's decision to pass upon the Leo M. Frank case, Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey, who prosecuted the prisoner, Monday afternoon issued a statement denouncing the bestowal of clemency and explaining why he had gone before the governor to oppose the Frank plea for commutation.

The statement, in full, is as follows:

"The action of Governor Slaton nullifying the judgments of the state and federal courts and overriding the recommendation of the state board of pardons was as surprising to me as it was unprecedented.

"No defendant within my recollection has had the benefit of more appeals to the judicial processes, state and federal, than Leo Frank. His guilt was conclusively established beyond a reasonable doubt to the satisfaction of an impartial jury of twelve reputable Georgians and their verdict was approved by the trial judge and affirmed by the supreme court of Georgia. Repeated efforts to have the judgment set aside have been denied by the supreme court, the United States district court and the supreme court of the United States.

"With this unbroken record of all available courts declaring Frank guilty of the heinous crime with which he was charged, the influential friends of Frank appealed to the state board of pardons elected by the people to pass on applications for pardons and commutations to be considered by the chief executive of the state, and the pardon board sustained the records of the courts of justice and declined to recommend the application for a commutation.

Satisfied of Verdict.

"I did not appear before the pardon board because I felt confident that, with the evidence and the court records before them, there would be no interference with the course of justice. When their decision refusing to recommend commutation was transmitted, I felt it to be my duty to plead for the enforcement of the law by the chief executive because I knew the force of the influences at work to nullify the judgments of the courts and of the pardon board.

"I knew that the senior member of Governor Slaton's law firm, Rosser, Slaton & Phillips, was the leading counsel for Frank, not only throughout his trial, but in prosecuting the original and extraordinary motion for new trial, and I knew it would be difficult for the governor to escape the subconscious effect of his environment.

"The constitution of Georgia commands the impartial and complete administration of our laws, and imposes this command upon the solicitor general of each circuit, as well as upon the governor of the state.

"My feeling that the governor was disqualified, at least to an extent, by his environment and affiliations, from viewing the records in this case impartially, prompted me to appear before him in person to urge the enforcement of the law.

"Not one of the grand jurors who found the true bill against Frank and not one of the jurors who convicted him joined in the petition for clemency, which was granted over the protest of the prosecuting attorneys and over the adverse recommendation of the state board of pardons.

"I cannot find in the record of the Frank case, or in the governor's lengthy statement of attempted justification, one reason why the governor should have departed from his declared policy and interfere with the judgments of the courts in this case."

MARCH TO GOVERNOR'S.

About 8 o'clock several thousand people gathered on the sidewalks between the city hall and Five Points. At 8:30 o'clock they began to move northward, with Governor Slaton's country place, near Buckhead, as their objective.

At Peachtree and Ellis streets a squad of city police was mobilized to stop them, but the crowd surged past.

The crowd, now numbering over 1,200, continued out Peachtree street to Porter place, where they divided, and part went Peachtree street, while the remainder proceeded out West Peachtree.

At Fourth street, on Peachtree, the Peachtree street crowd was met by another squad of police, and some were turned back, but the majority of them got by the police again.

At Brookwood the West Peachtree street and the Peachtree street contingents again met.

At Brookwood Bridge Chief of Police Beavers, in command of about forty policemen, met the crowd. A number of arrests were made here, and hundreds of the crowd were turned back. Several hundred, however, proceeded in getting by the police again and proceeded on foot out Peachtree road.

County Police on Guard.

At the governor's residence a formidable body of county police had been stationed under Chief of Police George Matheson, in anticipation of the crowd. When those on foot arrived they found a crowd already there, having come by automobile.

Sheriff Mangum was also there with a squad of deputies and a force of deputized citizens, in charge of W. Woods White.

The county police and the deputies arrayed themselves behind barbed wire entanglements just inside the governor's property, while the crowd gathered in the road outside. Sheriff Mangum asked the crowd to be orderly and disperse. He was met, however, with shouting and threats.

In the meantime the entire Fifth regiment had been mobilized at the Armory. A hurry call was sent in for troops, and a battalion, under command of Major J. V. Catron, was dispatched in automobiles. Upon arrival at the governor's residence the militia deployed along the road with fixed bayonets and pushed the crowd back towards the city.

The governor declared martial law within a radius of a half a mile of his house.

The crowd was gradually dispersed, but this was not accomplished until several men and officers of the militia had been wounded by stones, bottles and other missiles from the crowd. The militiamen, too, were forced a number of times to use the butts of their guns to force the crowd back.

Two Soldiers Hurt.

Among those who were hurt were Major Catron, cut upon the wrist with a broken bottle; Lieutenant Arnold Parker, struck in the stomach with a brick, and, perhaps, internally injured; W. W. Foote, a private, cut by a broken bottle; Clyde Harroughs, a private, struck with the butt of an automatic revolver; a man named McDonald, with an abrasion on the head.

Preston Moon, of Greenville, S. C., and Dick Carpenter, of Rutledge, were made prisoners.

After the crowd in front of the governor's residence was either dispersed or quieted, it was reported to Major Catron that 200 men from Marietta were approaching from the rear, down the Paces Ferry road.

A company was stationed to the north of the premises on Peachtree road, another to the south of the premises on Peachtree road, and a third company was stationed to the rear of the property in the neighborhood of Pace's Ferry road. Meanwhile the remaining company was divided into posts and stationed around the house.

General Nash Arrives.

Shortly after midnight Adjutant General J. Van Holt Nash arrived at the governor's residence and took personal command.

Another battalion was ordered out from the armory and proceeded on street cars. The Governor's Horse Guards, under Major J. O. Seamans, also reported at the governor's residence and helped in dispersing the crowd.

Governor Slaton issued a statement during the day in which he asked the people to have confidence that he had had read his decision on the case. He declared he was confident that he had done the right thing, and that he had only considered his duty in this case.

Enters Hardware Store.

The crowd on the way out broke into the branch store of the King hardware store on Peachtree street, at Tenth, presumably in search of arms and ammunition. Bricks and building material were picked up by the crowd from houses in course of construction along the way.

An incident at the governor's residence before the arrival of the militia was the discovery by County Policeman Haney of a man with 100 yards of the house with a revolver. He had slipped through the cordon of police. He was quickly overpowered, disarmed and placed under arrest.

Governor Slaton stated last night that, according to reports made to him by the county police, a large portion of the crowd was made up of boys between the ages of 12 and 18 years and that the older element are not representative of the people of Georgia.

In the governor's residence with him last night were Colonel W. L. Peel, Asa G. Candler, Jr., his private secretary; H. A. Alexander, attorney for Frank; L. L. Cooney and Ashley Jones of the New York Life Insurance company; A. L. Waldo, Attorney Robert Jones, Alben Jones and William and James Slaton, nephews of the governor.

NUMEROUS DEVELOPMENTS.

Numerous developments followed Frank's secret removal from the Tower to the state prison in Milledgeville at midnight Sunday. Governor Slaton delivered through the press to the public a voluminous explanation of his act of commutation, which is carried elsewhere in full.

The governor's action was first learned at his country home near Buckhead, on the Peachtree road. He did not come to his office throughout the day, although scheduled to appear there between 9 and 10 o'clock Monday morning to give his statement to the newspaper men.

Considerable excitement prevailed throughout the city from early dawn Monday, at which time the Constitution brought first news of the commutation, until last night, when the tension subsided. Large assemblages gathered in various parts of the downtown district and upon the capitol grounds.

Invade Governor's Office.

Among the incidents that arose during the day was the invasion of a crowd of men into the office of Governor Slaton, where they asked of his secretary, Jesse Perry, that they be admitted to the office of the chief executive, and be allowed to talk with him relative to the case. The secretary threw open the doors, revealing the absence of the governor.

This occurred during the morning. In the afternoon a gathering of about 1,000 collected upon the streets adjoining the city hall. Speeches were made by citizens picked from the crowd. Much excitement existed at one time when Policeman J. A. Bozeman, assigned to plain clothes duty to mingle in the throng, attacked Chief J. L. Beavers when the chief attempted to rebuke him for defending the tactics of the crowd.

Beavers was sternly admonishing the plain clothes man, when Bozeman suddenly drew back his fist and struck the chief in the face. Beavers clutched him in the collar, ripped off his badge, disarmed him and bundled him into a nearby patrol wagon, which had been kept with engine going at the curbstone at Marietta and Forsyth streets for any emergency that might arise.

A great number of arrests were made during the day. The slightest disorder merited a ride to police headquarters. Patrol wagons were kept working overtime. More arrests were made in the vicinity of the city hall than any other spot. But a few occurred on the capitol grounds.

Calls for Men.

At 1 o'clock in the afternoon the crowd that had gathered upon the capitol lawn, practically grouped around a speaker who had arisen upon the steps of a gray-haired man, thin and gaunt of frame, who plainly showed his sixty or more years.

"Who'll follow me?" he cried.

He led the way into the capitol and up the steps to the second floor, where the men packed the senate chamber. A number of speeches were made disapproving of the commutation. Sheriff Mangum, who had but shortly returned from his trip to Milledgeville, appeared in the crowd and took the rostrum.

He explained that Frank was in Milledgeville and not in Atlanta. He gave details of the trip, and declared that it was at the order of the governor, whose dictates he had been sworn to uphold. His address was brief. Afterward he quit the audience, returning to the jail, where he took a rest.

Regarding the situation in Atlanta, Mayor James G. Woodward wired the following message to The New York World Monday afternoon in reply to a query received from that paper:

"The sentiment of Atlanta is divided. The larger part of the population believes Frank guilty and that commutation was a mistake. Mass meetings approbating the governor have been held, but there has been no violence.

(Signed) "JAMES G. WOODWARD, "Mayor."

The police kept the situation competently in hand. Rid-ehorsed mounted squads patrolled the streets. Plainclothesmen mixed and mingled with the throngs, and no time did violence seem imminent.

MANY ARRESTED.

Many arrests were made last night in Marietta street and Forsyth—the city hall corner—where the huge gathering began to collect shortly after supper. Chief Beavers was in charge of a squad of fifty or more mounted policemen and patrolmen, who effectively managed to keep the traffic cleared and to keep the crowd in a scattered state.

News from Milledgeville late last night had it that the town was serene and there was no evidence of trouble. Frank retired early on account of the sleep he had lost on the journey the previous night. He will start today upon his first work as a lifer on the state farm. He will be given light tasks in the farm work until he recovers the strength lost by his two years' confinement.

Passengers reaching Atlanta last night reported excitement in Woodstock and Marietta and adjoining towns. In Woodstock and Marietta Governor Slaton had been hung in effigy.

LEAVES CELL.

The sentence of Leo M. Frank, condemned to die for the murder of Mary Phagan on Memorial day two years ago, was commuted late Sunday night by Governor John M. Slaton to life imprisonment.

The prisoner was taken out of the jail, under guard of Sheriff Mangum and a number of his deputies, and carried to the Terminal station. He was placed on Central of Georgia train No. 8, which left at 12:01 o'clock Monday morning for Milledgeville. The utmost secrecy was observed in taking the prisoner from the jail to the railroad station. Nothing was known of the move until the alert Constitution reporter at the Terminal station discovered that the attempt was being made to secretly take Frank to the prison farm at Milledgeville. The Constitution was on the streets with the first story before 2 o'clock in the morning.

Kept News From Frank.

Frank himself did not know that he was to live until just a few minutes before he was taken from the Tower in Atlanta. He had spent his quietest Sunday in the Tower. Usually on Sundays he had received long visits from relatives and friends, but on Sunday his confinement was practically solitary.

Shortly after 10 p. m. Sheriff Mangum entered the cell and told him to prepare to leave the Tower, in which he had been confined for more than two years. The words of the sheriff, which meant the life for which he had longed, and for which his friends have struggled so earnestly, were received in the same manner that Frank has received the news of each movement in his fight against the gallows.

Out of Side Door of Jail.

Whether the tidings were as dark as death to his cause or whether they were lighted with the brightest ray of hope, Frank has always been calm, cool and reasoning when they were brought him. And so he was Sunday night. The conclusion order of the governor meant to him everything in the world, but he never allowed his emotions to overcome his power of reasoning.

The utmost secrecy was preserved at the Tower throughout the day. Even before Frank was informed of the governor's action, Sheriff Mangum had issued an order closing the Tower to everyone. Even telephonic communication with the jail was stopped.

When he had completed himself for the journey, Sheriff Mangum and a number of deputies assembled on the lower floor of the prison and Frank was brought to them by a jailer. An automobile was in readiness at the entrance. While reporters, who had been watching the Tower all day, were keeping their vigil at the front of the prison, the little party went out the side door and entered the car. They were whirled away to the Terminal station.

Wife Was in Ignorance.

Not even his attorneys, nor his wife, were aware that his sentence had been commuted. Attaches of the Terminal station could hardly believe their eyes when they beheld the nation's most famous prisoner walking in the waiting room between a guard of six deputies, a transfer which Sheriff Mangum made.

Frank had been slipped out of the Tower while a group of reporters were waiting for him. His wife entered by the basement of the building and carried to the jail through a long, underground passage that opened into a maze of alleyways.

No outsiders were allowed in carrying out their program that Frank, himself, was informed when the news of the announcement at 10:30 o'clock that he was to go to Milledgeville at midnight. Dave Lowe, assisted by Sheriff Mangum, who ordered the prisoner to prepare for the trip.

Frank was given a rear seat in the train, which was a local and stopped repeatedly on the route. At the side Sheriff Mangum. Guard Patterson and the deputies were congregated nearby. The trip was made mostly in silence. Hardly a passenger on the train was aware that the most talked-of prisoner in America was a fellow-traveler.

Frank Takes Auto.

At Macon, when the train rolled into the station, it was found that the party would have to wait until 3 o'clock for connections to Milledgeville. A group of taxi-cabs stood at the stand beyond the station building. It was decided to make the remainder of the trip in the automobile machine. Frank selected his own automobile.

A squad of newspaper reporters ordered to meet the train by Atlanta and Macon newspapers, volleyed questions and cross questions at the Sheriff and his captive. Frank was reticent. Sheriff Mangum ventured the information that Frank had been commuted, but would say nothing else. The machine traveled to the outskirts, where a supply of gasoline was obtained at an all-night garage.

With a trail of newspaper automobiles following in its wake, the car bearing Frank arrived at Milledgeville between 4:30 and 5 o'clock, just as the sun of a new day was streaking the sky with purple. Necessary documents were signed by the sheriff, the prisoner passed over to the proper authorities—Leo M. Frank became Convict No. 966—and the sheriff and his bodyguard turned in the same automobile in which they had come.

HISTORY OF FIGHT.

Monday's events wrote the final chapters to the two years of judicial fight for the life of Leo Frank. He has obtained a compromise. The courts of the land have decreed that he shall, for the remainder of his life, stride the narrow confines of the state prison as No. 966 in stripes.

Never in the history of Georgia courts—even those of the entire United—has a case attracted more widespread attention. From Canada to the Rio Grande and from the Pacific to Atlantic it commanded an unprecedented interest. In the interest of the condemned man persons came from all parts of the country, and from every nook of the continent came messages pleading for executive mercy.

The fight for Frank's life continued without cessation for two years, during all of which time he remained in the county jail, a quiet, stoical prisoner, speaking to the public only occasionally, and then through authorized statements which he issued to the newspapers. Every judicial source to which he appealed turned him down until he had come to the governor, his last resort, when, on the very eve of the day marked for his doom, he was given a life sentence.

MONUMENT FOR VICTIM.

Valdosta, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—Citizens of Valdosta today began a petition with the following purpose in view:

"We, the undersigned citizens of the state of Georgia, hereby subscribe one dollar each towards a fund of one thousand dollars for the purpose of erecting a monument suitably taking care of the burial place of 'Little Mary Phagan,' who lost her life in the defense of her virtue." Contributions are solicited from all Georgians. Charles W. Barnes has been appointed to handle funds.

OPPOSE COMMUTATION.

Waycross, Ga., June 21.—(Special.) Replying to an inquiry from The New York World today asking for his opinion of sentiment in Waycross on Governor Slaton's commutation of Leo Frank's sentence, Mayor Scott T. Beacon tonight answered as follows: "The people here generally feel that governor should have refused commutation, inasmuch as all the courts had decided against Frank and the state pardoning board refused to recommend same. A great many good, conservative people, however, feel that Slaton acted wisely."

Slaton Condemned.

Canton, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—There was considerable excitement at this place today when it became known that Governor Slaton had commuted the sentence of Leo M. Frank to life imprisonment. There was universal condemnation of the governor's act. At least 90 per cent of the people of this county believe Leo Frank guilty and they felt like the law, as interpreted by the lower courts and affirmed by the higher courts, should have been allowed to take its course.

BURN SLATON IN EFFIGY.

Newnan, Ga., June 21.—(Special)—The effigies of Leo M. Frank and Governor John M. Slaton were hung to a giant oak in the park at the union station here tonight and set on fire, after which they were dragged blazing through the principal streets of Newnan, accompanied by about fifty automobiles. Later the charred effigies were hung to an enormous chautauqua sign, which is stretched across the street at the courthouse square. The effigies swung there until almost midnight, when they were cut down.

The effigies were prepared in the afternoon from clothing store dummies, artificial limbs and such material. Early in the night they were hung to an oak tree in the park, just a few blocks from the center of town. Some ten or fifteen gallons of kerosene and gasoline were poured upon them and fire was set to them.

The fire department was called out, in the presence of about 1,000 people the fire department made ready to extinguish the flames, but before this could be done the effigies were cut down and attached to the back of an automobile by lines long enough to allow the blazing effigies to drag along the ground. They were thus dragged through the town and later hung up.

Feeling ran at a high tension here until midnight, but no one was hurt and there was no property damage.

Guards Are Increased.

Milledgeville, Ga., June 22.—Although officers at the state prison here would not discuss the matter, it was learned from reliable sources here tonight that the number of guards on duty there has been increased since Leo M. Frank's arrival. It also was ascertained that there has been no request made for state troops.

There was no disturbance at the prison tonight. Warden Smith stated that Frank would be assigned to work tomorrow, probably in the cotton or corn fields.

VOTE MUST BE COUNTED, SAYS SUPREME COURT

Washington, June 21.—The constitution and statutes not only guarantee the right to vote, but requires the vote to be counted, the supreme court held today in reversing the federal district court of western Oklahoma, which annulled indictments of two Blaine county, Oklahoma, election officials charged with conspiracy to omit from congressional returns in 1912 the vote in eleven precincts.

Justice Lamar dissented saying that the "conspiracy statutes" of the United States could not be used to punish state election officials since the repeal of the "force law."

The case is said to have promised a possible way of disfranchising objectionable persons by communities from voting and to be far-reaching for that reason.

TELEPHONE COMPANY MAY CUT OFF SERVICE

Washington, June 21.—A six thousand dollar judgment won by Mrs. Adelia P. Dunaher, of Little Rock, Ark., from the South-western Telephone company for cutting off her service sixty-three days when she was in arrearage in her bill, was set aside today by the supreme court. The court held it is reasonable regulation for a telephone company to cut off service for arrearage.

Colonel John B. Porter Dead.

Fort Leavenworth, Kan., June 21.—Lieutenant Colonel John B. Porter, judge advocate general's department, United States army, died here today after a short illness, aged 59 years. He was senior instructor in the department of law at the army service schools here. He was regarded as one of the leading military law authorities of the United States.

BLANK CHECK GIVEN BY THE COMMONS

British Government May Fill Check for $5,000,000,000 to Meet War Expenses. Chancellor Explains Financial Situation.

London, June 21.—The house of commons adjourned tonight after unanimously giving a first reading to a bill providing the new chancellor of the exchequer, Reginald McKenna, with a blank check which may amount, at a maximum, to five billion dollars.

The vote of credit for $1,250,000,000, passed last week simply authorized the government to spend that much for war purposes, but did not provide for the manner in which it should be raised. Tonight's enactment was in the form of a resolution, empowering the government to raise not only the $1,250,000,000 deemed necessary to pay the cost of the war, at the rate of $15,000,000 daily, for a limited period, but as much more as may be needed.

The chancellor made a long explanation of the proposed loan, and, in closing, said that on the technical question as to the limit of the loan it would be dangerous to disclose the necessity for not fixing any definite sum, and he added that the only figure he could put in the bill was a maximum which would cover all requirements, including provisions enabling the subscribers to previous war loans and the holders of consols to participate. This maximum would not fall far short of a thousand million pounds sterling.

Of Indefinite Amount.

The new loan, which, as now provided for, is of an indefinite amount, will be issued at par, will bear interest at the rate of 4 1-2 per cent, and will be redeemed at the option of the government between 1925 and 1945.

While the chancellor is to receive a blank check for £1,000,000,000, he explained in his speech that he did not say he was asking for this sum, and if he did not get it, the loan would not be a failure, as he really did not expect to get that amount nor did he really want it. He deemed it advisable, however, to fix on a sum to meet adequately the necessities of the situation. The chancellor said he wished to appeal to the patriotism of the country, "to use its gigantic resources to carry on the war successfully for ourselves and our allies," and added: "I want the public to lend the money in a way which will not oblige us to repay it during the war."

Although the stock exchange had closed before Mr. McKenna's statement was published, the proposed new loan is said to have met with a favorable reception in the financial districts, but it is not yet possible to say how the terms of the loan will affect other kindred issues, such as consols and last November's war loan.

Generous Terms Provided.

The generous terms provided for holders of consols and the first war loan securities appear to meet the objections that have been urged in financial circles to the issue of a 4½ per cent loan.

During the course of his speech in the house, the chancellor of the exchequer, answering the suggestion that more money should be raised by additional taxation, said that it was best to take one step at a time. If, owing to the continuance of the war, it became necessary to find further very large sums, it was obvious that additional taxation would have to be proposed, but, he added, that time had not yet come.

There was more confusion in the house as to the precise terms on which holders of consols and the old war loan could convert their securities into the new loan. The chancellor explained that for every £100 nominal of these older securities, the holder who wished to convert would be obliged to subscribe for an additional £100 of the new war loan.

For example, the holder of £100 worth of old war loan stock must bring £100 in cash, the old war loan stock (issued at 95) and £5 cash and would receive in return new war loan stock valued at £200. Consols would be convertible under the same terms on the basis of £75 of consols for £50 of the new loan. The chancellor concluded with the statement that the minimum the government could set on the amount of the loan would be a sum sufficient for the conversion of all the old war loans, all the consols and annuity in addition to a sum for voucher and other small investors.

Wanted Public Money.

Mr. McKenna said that unless the loan was issued the only method whereby the country could continue to pay its way would be by further indefinite issue of treasury bills, and that would mean use of bankers' money, not public money.

"I want the public to lend the money in a way which will not oblige us to repay during the war," he continued.

"We require many hundreds of millions," said the chancellor. "If on the old war loan the investors can get rather better than 4¼, we cannot expect the new issue to be floated at less than 4½."

After explaining the proposal that, if a higher rate of interest should be offered on subsequent loans, holders of the forthcoming loan should receive the higher rate, Mr. McKenna continued:

"This is a great national appeal to every class for a great national purpose."

The chancellor then proceeded to explain the method by which he intended to let the people utilize their savings. He said that while the minimum subscription through the Bank of England would be £100, the government had in view three methods of issue to meet every class and purse: the first through the Bank of England; the second, the sale of £5, to £25, bonds through postoffices; the third, the sale of war loan vouchers for 5 shillings and multiples thereof.

To Be Exchanged for Bonds.

These vouchers will carry interest at the rate of 5 per cent per annum for every complete calendar month. The vouchers, when a total of £5 has been purchased, will be exchanged at postoffices for a £5 bond. Allotment will be made on application and the lists will be closed on or before July 10.

"Our requirements are great and every effort made now is an effort not only necessary to enable us to carry on the war, but to enable us to maintain our financial pre-eminence after the war," Mr. McKenna continued. "He who subscribes now is doing an act of mercy both to himself and to his country. He who subscribes now and saves in order to subscribe will be able to bear the strain after the war is over, and will be thankful for the efforts made to help himself. But still dearer to him must be the knowledge that every aid he gives himself is multiplied for his country, and his country will bless him for his providence and generosity."

NEW PEACE MOVE LIKELY IN MEXICO

Gen. Angeles Will Probably Head the Movement—Carranza Is in a Clash With His Supporters.

Washington, June 21.—The unexpected arrival in the United States of General Felipe Angeles, General Villa's principal military expert since the split in the Mexican constitutionalist movement, and reports of friction between General Carranza and his field leader, Obregon, have given rise to persistent rumors that certain elements in the contending factions are about to inaugurate a definite movement to bring about peace in Mexico.

Statement by Angeles.

General Angeles, passing through Chicago today, en route to Boston, where he will visit his family, denied there had been any break between himself and Villa. This was asserted also by Villa representatives in Washington. Enrique C. Llorente, Villa's special agent and a close personal friend of Angeles, although disclaiming any official knowledge, intimated that Angeles had been commissioned to discuss peace plans with the Washington government and that some of Carranza's leading supporters, including Obregon and members of the Carranza cabinet whose resignations have been accepted, were cognizant of efforts to be made for a solution of Mexican difficulties.

General Carranza, who thus far has declined to accept Villa's offer for a conference to devise a plan for re-establishment of constitutional government, formally notified his Washington representatives today that reports of a break between himself and Obregon were untrue. Notwithstanding this, however, officials here were inclined to the belief that Obregon and other constitutionalist leaders who thus far have stood by Carranza in his uncompromising attitude were now ready to talk of peace negotiations.

Regarded as Significant.

The resignations of a part of the Carranza cabinet were regarded here as particularly significant in view of Carranza's refusal to consider Villa's appeal for a conference. It was reported that friends of General Carranza in the United States had undertaken to dissuade him in his decision to ignore Villa's request for a conference.

Of particular interest to Washington officials was the announcement from London late today that Sir Edward Grey, secretary for foreign affairs, had warned British subjects against visiting Mexico unless absolutely obliged to do so. A few hours before news of this reached the United States advices reached the state department from Mazatlan that Yaqui Indians had raided the town of Mochis and had killed John Jamieson, a British subject.

Washington officials still view the Yaqui uprising with considerable concern, and await reports from Rear Admiral Howard, who arrived at Guymas yesterday on his flagship Colorado to afford protection to foreigners in the Yaqui valley.

Unless renewed attacks are made on Americans it is understood Admiral Howard will hold his men on shipboard and await the outcome of Governor Jose Maytorena's campaign against the Indians.

LANSING TO GET POST DESERTED BY BRYAN

Believed That the Matter Will Be Settled at Cabinet Meeting Today.

Washington, June 21.—President Wilson was understood tonight to have virtually decided on Robert Lansing as secretary of state to succeed William Jennings Bryan.

It was said in well informed quarters that it was almost a certainty that Mr. Lansing—counselor and secretary ad interim of the state department—would be given the portfolio. White house officials refused to make any statement further than to say that the subject still was under consideration.

Mr. Lansing will be in New York tomorrow and it is expected that the selection of a secretary of state will be discussed at the cabinet meeting. Several cabinet members are known to favor Mr. Lansing.

The president plans to leave here Wednesday night for New York, where he will spend Thursday with Colonel E. M. House before going to the "summer white house" at Cornish, N. H. It has been considered likely that he would discuss the question of Mr. Bryan's successor with Colonel House before making an announcement, but tonight there was said to be a possibility that the appointment might be made tomorrow.

Colonel House himself has been prominently mentioned for the place and many officials think he could have it if he would accept it. He always has refused to accept public office, however. It has been pointed out, too, that Colonel House is from Texas and two of the present members of the cabinet—Attorney General Gregory and Postmaster General Burleson—are from the same state.

SULLIVAN HELD UNFIT FOR DIPLOMATIC POST

Investigating Committee Reports to Wilson on Minister to Domingo.

Washington, June 21.—James M. Sullivan, American minister to the Dominican Republic, is held to be temporarily unfit for his office by the report of Senator Phelan, who conducted an investigation into charges. It is understood the report, however, finds the minister is not guilty of any illegal or dishonest acts. President Wilson has finished reading the report, and it will be made public soon. Meanwhile, officials declined to discuss it.

Minister Sullivan sailed from Fortau-Prince on the steamer Iroquois for New York on a leave of absence of sixty days. At the state department it was said he had been in poor health for some time.

WHOLE FRANK CASE REVIEWED IN SLATON'S STATEMENT

COULD NOT BELIEVE CONLEY'S EVIDENCE

Declares It Was So Conflicting It Was of No Value—Says His Action Is Justified by the Records, by New Evidence and Judge Roan's Statement.

A statement explaining his action in commuting the sentence of Leo M. Frank was given to the newspapers by Governor John M. Slaton Saturday at noon. The statement was issued from his country home on Peachtree road, where he spent the entire day Monday.

Governor Slaton points out chiefly that he could not be brought to believe the conflicting stories of the negro Jim Conley. He states that he believes his action to be patriotic, judicial and in accord with the best interests of the state of Georgia, and that the thinking people of the state support him.

Executive Office, June 21, 1915.

In Re Leo M. Frank, Superior Court. Sentenced to be executed June 22, 1915.

Saturday, April 26, 1913, was Memorial day in Georgia and a general holiday. At that time Mary Phagan, a white girl, of about 14 years of age, was in the employ of the National Pencil company, located near the corner of Forsyth and Hunter streets, in the city of Atlanta. She came to the pencil factory for a little after noon to obtain the money due her for her work on the preceding Monday. Leo M. Frank, the defendant, paid her $1.20, the amount due her, and this was the last time she was alive.

Frank was tried for the offense and found guilty the succeeding August. Application for new trial was duly entered.

This case has been the subject of extensive comments during the past few months of the United States and has occasioned the intervention of two of the courts, resulting from various states requesting clemency. Many communications have been received from citizens of this state advocating or opposing interference with the sentence of the court.

I desire to say in this connection that the position of the state of Georgia among the esteem and good will of the people of every state in the Union is high, and wishes the approbation of his fellows, and state or nation is not indifferent to the preamble to the Declaration of Independence Thomas Jefferson wrote that "When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation."

Georgia Attacked.

Many newspapers and multitudes of people have attacked the state of Georgia because of the conviction of Leo M. Frank, and have declared the conviction to have been thoroughly inspired by mob spirit and with no evidence to support the verdict. This conviction has been declared to be inconsistent by those who have not read the evidence and who are not familiar with the judicial procedure in our state.

I have been unable to even open a large proportion of the letters sent me, because of their number and because I could not bring myself to undertake the task of determining my duty.

The case committed was a most heinous one. A young girl was strangled to death by a cord tied around her neck, and the offender deserves the punishment of death. The only question is as to the identity of the criminal.

The responsibility is upon the people of Georgia to see that the laws of her citizens and to maintain the dignity of her laws, and the choice must be made to secure the approbation of citizens of other states and the enforcement of our laws on the offenders, whether powerful or weak, we must choose the latter alternative.

Alleged Mob Spirit.

It is charged that the court and jury were terrorized by a mob and the jury were coerced into a verdict.

I expect to present the facts in this case with absolute fairness and to state conclusions with reason and only reason.

When Frank was indicted and the air was thick with rumors and with the murder and mutilation of the dead girl, there was intense excitement and indignation. Governor predecessor, Governor Brown, stated in argument before me that he had the military ready to preserve order if defendant's plea of any attack was made. No such attack was made, and from the evidence it seems to be obtained none was contemplated.

Some time after the defendant was put on trial, Georgia probably has the broadest provisions for change of venue in criminal cases that exist in any state. Our law permits the change of venue by consent on his own motion, in the event he thinks a fair trial cannot be given in any county. The defendant in this case took advantage of venue on the same ground, and, if it be proper for the refusal of the judge is entitled to an immediate appeal to the supreme court, and in fact, the defendant's plea and law demands a fair trial, absolutely free from external influences.

Frank went to trial without asking a change of venue, and apparently was content to a jury that was acceptable to him. He was ably represented by counsel of conspicuous ability and experience.

During the progress of the case, after evidence had been introduced, the details of crime with many offensive details upon Frank, the defendant, were published to intense. He was the general superintendent of the factory and Mary Phagan was a poor, working girl. He was a Cornell graduate and a man dependent upon his livelihood upon her labor. According to a witness, there was nothing in that transaction related more completely; there was only the same in the ordinary course of the day's worked one day in the week, because of lack of material, the general superintendent solicited her to visit the factory on duties and on her refusal slew her.

The publication of this story anywhere and in any community would excite unbounded condemnation.

If the audience in the courtroom manifested their deep resentment toward Frank it was largely by this evidence of feeling beyond the control of a court of justice. It would be difficult anywhere for any appellate court to grant a new trial in a case which, court, to grant a new trial in a case which, court, to grant a days, because the audience in the courtroom shows a few occasional outbursts of sympathies. However, the deep feeling against Frank which developed during the progress of the evidence was in the atmosphere and regardless of the participation of those acts of which the court would take cognizance, the feeling of the public was strong.

Called for Sheriff.

Since Governor Brown has related secret history in his public argument before me, I may state that Friday night before the verdict was expected Saturday I had the sheriff to call at the mansion and inquire whether he anticipated trouble. This was after many people had told me of possible danger and an editor of a leading newspaper indicated his anticipation of trouble. The sheriff stated he thought his deputies could avert any difficulty. Judge Roan telephoned me that he had arranged for the defendant to be present when the verdict was rendered. Like Governor Brown, I entered into communication with the colonel of the Fifth regiment, who stated he would be ready if there were necessity.

I was leaving on Saturday the day the verdict was expected, for Colorado Springs to attend the congress of governors, and did not wish to be absent if my presence was necessary. I have never given an order prepared by me at the time, in the event there was trouble, I would be in Atlanta and advised there would be slight chance for any use of force, and therefore filled my engagement in Colorado.

Judge Roan, in the exercise of precaution, requested that both counsel and defendant be absent when the verdict was rendered, in order to avoid any possible demonstration, in the event of acquittal.

The jury found the defendant guilty, and with the exception of demonstration outside the courtroom, there was no disorder.

Hence, it will be seen that nothing was done which courts of any state could correct through legal machinery. A court must have something more than an atmosphere with which to deal, and especially when that atmosphere has been created by the due processes of evidence in disclosing a horrible crime.

Our supreme court, after carefully considering the evidence and demonstrations made by spectators, declared them without merit, and in this regard the orderly process of our tribunals is not subject for criticism.

The charge against the state of Georgia of racial prejudice is likewise without merit. Jewish family in Georgia is descended from one of the original settlers of Georgia of the state. Jews have been presidents of our boards of education, principals of our schools, mayors of our cities and conspicuous in all our commercial enterprises.

The Facts in the Case

Many newspapers and non-residents have declared that Frank was convicted without any evidence to sustain the verdict. In large measure, those giving expression to this utterance have not read the evidence and are not acquainted with the facts. The same may be said regarding many of those who are demanding his execution.

In my judgment, no one has a right to an opinion who is not acquainted with the evidence in the case, and it must be conceded that the jury who saw the witnesses and heard their testimony and their manner are in the best position as a general rule to reach the truth.

I cannot, within the short time given me to decide the case, review the facts which are outlined in thousands of pages of testimony. I will present, however, the facts which I have a right to ask that all persons who are not acquainted with the evidence in the case, shall read calmly and dispassionately the facts.

The state proved that Leo M. Frank, the general superintendent of the factory, came to his office on the morning of April 26, on the 26th day of April, 1913, and he admitted having paid Mary Phagan $1.20, being the wages due her for one day's work. He stated that she came to his office to become, in order to know when she could work for one day a week. He stated that so far as is known he was the last one who saw her alive. At 2 o'clock the next morning, Monday, April 27, Lee, the night watchman, found in the basement the body of Mary Phagan. Investigation by the coroner of a kind kept generally in the metal room, which is used for that purpose, and a cloth tied around her head which was found in the factory. Her finger nails were either ripped or cut and some blood was found on the floor there. Her eye was very black, indicating a blow, and there was a cut 2¼ inches in length about four inches above the left ear. The cut was deep, of which extended through the scalp to the skull. A post-mortem examination was examined on Sunday morning, declared there was no evidence that the girl was a victim of criminal assault, but that the blood was characteristic of menstrual flow. There was no evidence of rape. The girl's body was not mutilated, the wounds thereon were not made by a knife, except for the cut on the elbow, and a wound about two inches below the knee.

Medical evidence showed that Mary Phagan had eaten her dinner of bread and cabbage at 11:30 o'clock, and that she died at 12 o'clock to the pencil factory, which would enable the digestion of the cabbage and bread that she had eaten. The digestion of the cabbage and bread that she had eaten the meal.

Lee, the night watchman, testified that Frank had "told me to be there at 12 o'clock, as a girl was coming afternoon," and when he "came upstairs to report, Frank was walking the floor." Newt Lee and told him to "go out and look around the basement." Frank and Lee said he would prefer to lie down and sleep. When Lee returned, Frank changed his clothes, and from the evidence of his nervousness and taking a longer time than usual.

When Frank walked out of the front door of the factory, he met Jim Conley and Gantt, whom he had discharged a short time before. Frank and Gantt testified, his explanation being that he anticipated harm, Gantt declared that he wished to negotiate and get two pairs of shoes, which permission to be granted, stating that he thought they had been sweat-fed.

About an hour after this occurrence Frank and Gantt were over the factory, a thing he had never done before, and asked Lee to accompany them. Lee found the double inner doors locked, which was the first time that way before. Subsequently, when Lee was arrested and in jail, he requested that the detectives to go in and talk to him, in order to make a clean breast of what they knew. Frank dropped his head and stated, "If you keep that up we will both go to hell."

On Sunday morning at about 9 o'clock, after Mrs. Frank, the night watchman, had telephoned the police station of the discovery of the body, Detective Starnes had come to the factory, they endeavored to reach Mrs. Frank by telephone, but could get a response. They telephoned at 7:30 Sunday morning and while Mrs. Frank stated she wanted him to come down to the factory would when she arrived, she was very nervous and trembled. The body at that time had been in the metal room for about 24 hours, and according to the evidence of the officers, it was the wish of the management to establishment to identify the girl, he (Frank) showed a disinclination to look at the body, and did not go to the metal room at once, but turned away at the door.

Frank's statement in argument on Friday to go to the baseball game on Saturday afternoon had been made before he broke the engagement, as he said in his statement, because of the death of Mary Phagan. He did make up, while before the coroner's jury he said he broke the engagement because of threatening weather.

State's Contention.

The contention of the state, as we have, after be disclosed, was that Frank remained at the factory Saturday afternoon to dispose of the body of Mary Phagan, and that that was the reason he gave Newt Lee his unusual leave of absence.

Frank's statement testified that on Saturday, the day of the murder, he visited his wife at the home of Rabbi Being, Frank's father-in-law, where Frank and his wife were living, and that Frank came in to dinner with nothing unusual in that time, and the Seligs was placed upon the stand and testified that Frank was there for a short time at all on that day. For purposes of impeachment, Solicitor General Dorsey introduced an affidavit from this cook taken by the detectives on the day of the murder, which tended to substantiate the story of Frank's statement and this affidavit declared that on Sunday morning after the murder, Mrs. Frank had come to the house and that Mr. Frank was drinking the night before and made her sleep on a rug and called for breakfast on Sunday because he (Frank) had murdered a girl. This affidavit was signed by the cook by mark, and declared, although, of course, it had no legal probative force, that it was false. When called to the stand, the cook declared that she was induced to sign the affidavit because of the threat of being locked up unless she gave it, and that the statement was untrue. The state proved it was given in the presence of the detectives, and that they knew of the truth of the affidavit was because her self and Mrs. Frank had been in the house Mrs. Frank. No details are given as to what the conversation was between Mrs. Frank and her mother, nor is there any explanation as to how she happened to hear the statement of the cook. The safety that the effect of the affidavit upon the jury is apparent.

It is hard to conceive that any man's power of mind could be so warped that he could reach that which Conley showed, unless it be the truth.

The evidence introduced tended to show that Frank went to the factory at 10 o'clock, the time clock the slip which he had admitted that Frank had punched at 10:05 and a half hour, and subsequently Frank claimed that some punches had been missed. The state contended that Frank either manufactured the slip to place the burden on Lee, or had punched the clock for some one and left the slip correctly.

Lee introduced a witness, Monteen Stover, to prove that at the time when Mary Phagan and Frank were in the metal room she was in Frank's office and he was absent, although Frank's hat was hanging in the office. The state showed that the hat of Mary Phagan had been washed by the undertaker with pine tar soap, which would change the color and thereby interfere with the ability of the doctor to tell the difference between the hair on the lathe and Mary Phagan's hair.

The state further showed a cord of the character with which strangled Mary Phagan was found in quantities on the metal room floor, and found pieces in less quantities and then cut up in the basement. As to this, Detective Starnes testified: "I saw a cord like that in the basement, but it was cut up in a lot of pieces. I saw a good many cords like that all over the factory."

Dorsey asked: "These cords are all over the building and in the basement."

Starnes: "Yes, the same effect."

However, this contradicts the testimony that was presented to the jury for solution.

The state claimed to the jury that witnesses for the defendant, under the suggestion of counsel in open court, would not operate against the defendant.

We have not commented all the suspicious circumstances urged by the state, but have mentioned what have appeared to me the most prominent ones. Where I have not mentioned the more prominent ones, careful inspection of record fails to maintain the contention.

It is contended that a lawyer was engaged for Frank at the station house before he was arrested. This is replied to by the defense that a friend had engaged counsel without Frank's knowledge, and the lawyer advised Frank to make full statement to the detectives.

Conley's Evidence.

The most startling and spectacular evidence in the case was that given by a negro, Jim Conley, a man 27 years of age, and one who frequently had been in the chaingang. Conley had worked at the factory, was familiar with the building and thoroughly acquainted with it. He had worked in the basement about two months and had run the elevator about a year and a half.

On May 1 he was arrested by the detectives.

Near the body in the basement had been found two sheets of writing paper, one a piece of paper and the other on a leaf of a scratch pad. That written on white paper is a negro's handwriting showed the following: "He said he would love me, lay down play like the night witch, did it, but that long tall black negro did the business."

On the brown paper, which made the cardboard sheet of an order blank headed "Atlanta, Ga., ..., 191—," was written in a negro's handwriting the following:

"Mam that negro fire down here did this i went down stairs after the fire and down a hole a long tall negro black did this i don't play with white slips."

The detectives learned about the middle of May that Conley could write, although at first he denied it. He was asked to write and three affidavits which are more fully referred to in the statement of Frank. The affidavits were introduced by the defendant and admitted therefore.

By these affidavits there was admitted the similarity of the evidence as to the delivered on the stand, which in brief was as follows:

Conley claimed that he was asked by Frank to come to the factory on Saturday and watch for him, as he asked in the note which he explained meant that Frank expected a negro girl to come there. That Frank stamped his foot Conley was to look when he whistled, he was to open it. That Frank whistled, he was to open it. That Frank went to the office on the north side of the elevator behind some boxes, where he would be hidden.

Conley mentioned several people, including male and female employees, who went to Frank's office, but declared that when Frank's office was located. He said that Frank went to the office and that he never heard in a few minutes footsteps going to the metal room. Frank drew from there to 200 feet from the office. He heard a scuffle and then he dosed off in a few minutes Frank stamped and then Conley locked the door, and then Frank whistled, and he went down Conley unlocked the door and went up the steps. Frank was shivering in the shaft. Frank told him to "I wanted to be with the little girl, and she struck me and I struck her, and she struck too hard and she fell and hit her head against something and died. I never knew how bad she got hurt. Of course, you know I ain't built like other men."

Refuses to Carry Body.

Conley described Frank as having been in position which Conley thought indicated the possession of a pistol, but did not see it.

Conley says that he found Mary Phagan lying in the metal room. He left and went to the office, with a cloth tied about her neck and under the head as though to catch blood, although there was no blood in that place.

Frank told Conley to get a piece of cloth and put the body in it and Conley got a piece of burlap sack and put the dead body in it and brought it to a place a little way from the elevator shaft, and Frank and he then called on Frank for assistance in carrying it. Frank went to his office and got a key and went down the elevator in order to operate the elevator, and he and Conley carried the body to the floor in the basement, where Conley rolled the body off the burlap sack and Frank knelt on the floor by the ladder, while Conley went by the elevator. Frank and Conley then got into the elevator and went to the second floor, on which is the factory of Montag Brothers, and went into Frank's private office and just at that time Frank said, "My God, there is a package of cord in Corinthian Hall," and Frank then put Conley into the metal room, where he left, locking Conley out and asked Conley if he could write, and Conley stated that Frank frightened him. Frank then dictated the letters heretofore referred to. Frank took out of the desk a roll of greenbacks and told him, "Here is $200," but after a while requested the money be left in the safe.

One witness testified she saw some negro in the metal room over the elevator, at the side of the elevator in the gloom. Another witness testified that he saw Conley, a woman, who was unimpeached, made affidavit that Conley had never left the office through newspaper report, she saw that Conley claimed he met Frank at 1:30 on the corner of Forsyth and Nelson streets on the 26th day of April 1913. Both sides were satisfied that no one of the two in close conversation at that place on that date, between 10 and 2 o'clock.

Frank's Character.

Frank put his character in issue and the state introduced ten witnesses to impeach Frank's character, some of whom were factory employees, who unfavorably impressed the jury. Another witness testified that Frank had improperly gone into the dressing room of the girls. Seven witnesses who answered on direct examination that Frank's reputation for peaceableness was bad, were not cross-examined on the subject of the girls, nor was the subject of comment before the jury.

The above states very briefly the gist of the facts in the case, and the manner in which the state claimed would confirm Frank's statement when taken in its entirety.

The defendant introduced approximately one hundred witnesses as to his good character, and among them were Frank's college mates at Cornell and professors of the college.

The defendant was born in Texas and his education was completed at the institution named.

The admission of Conley that he wrote the notes found by the body of the dead girl, together with the part he admitted he played in the murder transaction, destroyed his history and his explanation as to both the notes and the finding of the body to the basement, make the entire theory of Frank untenable. Did Conley speak the truth?

Before going into the varying and conflicting affidavits made by Conley, it is advisable to refer to some incidents which cannot be successfully controverted. Wherever a physical fact is stated by Conley, which is controverted by other evidence, but under both the rules of law and of common sense, his statement is not to be received, excepting where clearly corroborated. Also it is proper to take into duplication as a accessory, but also guilty confesses to the infamy of murder.

Conley Contradicted.

One fact in the case, and that of most important force in arriving at the truth, contradicts the statement of Conley. It is agreeable to refer to it, but delicacy must yield to necessity when human life is at stake.

The mystery in the case is the question of Mary Phagan's body got into the basement. It was found by Lee, coming from the elevator, and the face gave evidence of having been rubbed in cinders. She had dirt in her eyes and cinders. Conley testified that he carried and took the body down to the basement in the elevator. He testified that on the afternoon of April 26, 1913, and leaves for inference that he carried the body of the girl to the rear of the building, where the body of Mary Phagan was found, back door, which led out toward the street to the factory, but went back to the basement. Conley says Frank went back on the ladder, constituting the only means of ingress and egress to the basement, excepting through the elevator shaft, and that either at 11 o'clock on the afternoon of April 26, or 1 o'clock on the morning of April 27 he went down into the basement and there he says he utilized the elevator shaft for the purpose.

On the morning of April 27 at 2 o'clock, when the detectives and police had been notified by way of the ladder, they inspected the basement, and when Conley and they found there humas excrement in natural condition.

Subsequently, when they used the elevator, the elevator would not operate, which had run the elevator for 1¼ years, although the girl was found in the basement, the elevator struck the second floor and stopped. Conley demonstrating that the elevator had been used since the girl was killed. Detective Starnes, Detective Dorsey, Mr. Howard and myself visited the pencil factory and went down this elevator, Conley in charge. Starnes said that he went again with my secretary, with the same result.

Frank is delicate in physique, while Conley is strong and powerful. Conley's place for watching, as described by himself, was in the gloom a few feet from the hatchway leading by way of ladder to the basement, and he was a few feet of the elevator shaft on the first floor. Conley's place for watching the shaft was in accordance with his testimony that he was to water twice against the door of the elevator shaft, to the morning of the 26th, instead of doing so in the gloom of his corner behind the box where he kept watch.

Passed Near Conley.

Mary Phagan in coming downstairs was compelled to pass within a few feet of Conley, who was invisible to her, and in a few feet of the hatchway. Frank could not have carried her down the hatchway. Conley might have done so with difficulty. If the elevator shaft was not used by Conley and Frank in taking the body to the basement, then the explanation of Conley, who testified that Frank carried the body by himself, cannot be accepted.

In addition, there was found in the elevator shaft at 2 o'clock Sunday morning by the detectives, which was unseen, and a ball of cord which had not been mashed.

Frank's statement and the detectives testified he wrapped up the body in a crocus sack at the suggestion of Frank, and in the sack the body is found wrapped up the body in a piece of bedticking. This is the sole evidence against. The only reason for such change of testimony, unless it was untrue, was that a crocus sack, unless split open, would be too small for the purpose. If he split open the crocus sack with a knife, this would suggest the use of a knife in cutting the drawers of the girl.

So far as the question arises, whether there was any bedtick in the pencil factory, and no reason can be offered why bedtick should be there. Frank's statement is in fact confirmed. Had such unusual cloth been found in the factory, it certainly must have been known, but nobody has ever found it.

Conley testified that after the deed was committed, which everybody admits could not have been before 12:05, Frank suddenly said, "Here, Jim, Emma Clark lives in Carrollton Hall," and he put Conley in a wardrobe.

The uncontradicted evidence of these two witnesses, the detectives testified that when they reached the factory at 11:35 a. m. on April 26, 1913, certainly must have been the time when Conley was in the basement.

Conley says that when they got the body to the bottom of the elevator in the basement, Frank told him to "get a piece of cloth and a piece of ribbon right there, but he "taken the cloth from the bottom of the box in front of the boiler," which was 67 feet away.

Conley says that Frank told him when he (Frank) stamped, and to open the door when he (Frank) stamped, and to open the door when he whistled, he was to open it.

Conley mentioned several people, including male and female employees, who went to Frank's office was located. He said that Frank's office was located. He said that Frank went to the office and that he never heard in a few minutes footsteps going to the metal room. Frank drew from there to 200 feet from the office. He heard a scuffle and then he dosed off in a few minutes Frank stamped and then Conley locked the door, and then Frank whistled, and he went down Conley unlocked it and went up the steps. I never knew how bad she got hurt. Of course, you know I ain't built like other men."

The above states very briefly the gist of the facts in the case, and the manner in which the state claimed would confirm Frank's statement when taken in its entirety.

The defendant introduced approximately one hundred witnesses as to his good character, and among them were Frank's college mates at Cornell and professors of the college.

The defendant was born in Texas and his education was completed at the institution named.

The admission of Conley that he wrote the notes found by the body of the dead girl, together with the part he admitted he played in the murder transaction, destroyed his history and his explanation as to both the notes and the finding of the body to the basement, make the entire theory of Frank untenable. Did Conley speak the truth?

Before going into the varying and conflicting affidavits made by Conley, it is advisable to refer to some incidents which cannot be successfully controverted. Wherever a physical fact is stated by Conley, which is controverted by other evidence, but under both the rules of law and of common sense, his statement is not to be received, excepting where clearly corroborated. Also it is proper to take into duplication as a accessory, but also guilty confesses to the infamy of murder.

Conley Contradicted.

One fact in the case, and that of most important force in arriving at the truth, contradicts the statement of Conley. It is agreeable to refer to it, but delicacy must yield to necessity when human life is at stake.

The mystery in the case is the question how Mary Phagan's body got into the basement. It was found by Lee, coming from the elevator, and the face gave evidence of having been rubbed in cinders. She had dirt in her eyes and cinders. Conley testified that he carried and took the body down to the basement in the elevator. He testified that on the afternoon of April 26, 1913, and leaves for inference that he carried the body of the girl to the rear of the building, where the body of Mary Phagan was found, back door, which led out toward the street to the factory, but went back to the basement. Conley says Frank went back on the ladder, constituting the only means of ingress and egress to the basement, excepting through the elevator shaft, and that either at 11 o'clock on the afternoon of April 26, or 1 o'clock on the morning of April 27 he went down into the basement and there he says he utilized the elevator shaft for the purpose.

On the morning of April 27 at 2 o'clock, when the detectives and police had been notified by way of the ladder, they inspected the basement, and when Conley and they found there humas excrement in natural condition.

Subsequently, when they used the elevator, the elevator would not operate, which had run the elevator for 1¼ years, although the girl was found in the basement, the elevator struck the second floor and stopped. Conley demonstrating that the elevator had not been used since the girl was killed. Detective Starnes, Detective Dorsey, Mr. Howard and myself visited the pencil factory and went down this elevator, Conley in charge. Starnes said that he went again with my secretary, with the same result.

Frank is delicate in physique, while Conley is strong and powerful. Conley's place for watching, as described by himself, was in the gloom a few feet from the hatchway leading by way of ladder to the basement, and he was a few feet of the elevator shaft on the first floor. Conley's place for watching the shaft was in accordance with his testimony that he was to water twice against the door of the elevator shaft, to the morning of the 26th, instead of doing so in the gloom of his corner behind the box where he kept watch.

Passed Near Conley.

Mary Phagan in coming downstairs was compelled to pass within a few feet of Conley, who was invisible to her, and in a few feet of the hatchway. Frank could not have carried her down the hatchway. Conley might have done so with difficulty. If the elevator shaft was not used by Conley and Frank in taking the body to the basement, then the explanation of Conley, who testified that Frank carried the body by himself, cannot be accepted.

In addition, there was found in the elevator shaft at 2 o'clock Sunday morning by the detectives, which was unseen, and a ball of cord which had not been mashed.

Frank's statement and the detectives testified he wrapped up the body in a crocus sack at the suggestion of Frank, and in the sack the body is found wrapped up the body in a piece of bedticking. This is the sole evidence against. The only reason for such change of testimony, unless it was untrue, was that a crocus sack, unless split open, would be too small for the purpose. If he split open the crocus sack with a knife, this would suggest the use of a knife in cutting the drawers of the girl.

So far as the question arises, whether there was any bedtick in the pencil factory, and no reason can be offered why bedtick should be there. Frank's statement is in fact confirmed. Had such unusual cloth been found in the factory, it certainly must have been known, but nobody has ever found it.

Conley testified that after the deed was committed, which everybody admits could not have been before 12:05, Frank suddenly said, "Here, Jim, Emma Clark lives in Carrollton Hall," and he put Conley in a wardrobe.

The uncontradicted evidence of these two witnesses, the detectives testified that when they reached the factory at 11:35 a. m. on April 26, 1913, certainly must have been the time when Conley was in the basement.

Conley says that when they got the body to the bottom of the elevator in the basement, Frank told him to get a piece of cloth and a piece of ribbon right there, but he "taken the cloth from the bottom of the box in front of the boiler," which was 67 feet away.

Conley says that Frank told him when he (Frank) stamped, and to open the door when he whistled, he was to open it.

Conley mentioned several people, including male and female employees, who went to Frank's office was located. He said that Frank went to the office and that he never heard in a few minutes footsteps going to the metal room. Frank drew from there to 200 feet from the office. He heard a scuffle and then he dosed off in a few minutes Frank stamped and then Conley locked the door, and then Frank whistled, and he went down Conley unlocked it and went up the steps. Frank was shivering in the shaft. Frank told him to "I wanted to be with the little girl, and she struck her, and she struck too hard and she fell and hit her head against something and died. I never knew how bad she got hurt. Of course, you know I ain't built like other men."

Refuses to Carry Body.

Conley described Frank as having been in position which Conley thought indicated the possession of a pistol, but did not see it.

Conley says that he found Mary Phagan lying in the metal room. He left and went to the office, with a cloth tied about her neck and under the head as though to catch blood, although there was no blood in that place.

Frank told Conley to get a piece of cloth and put the body in it and Conley got a piece of burlap sack and put the dead body in it and brought it to a place a little way from the elevator shaft, and Frank and he then called on Frank for assistance in carrying it. Frank went to his office and got a key and went down the elevator in order to operate the elevator, and he and Conley carried the body to the floor in the basement, where Conley rolled the body off the burlap sack and Frank knelt on the floor by the ladder, while Conley went by the elevator. Frank and Conley then got into the elevator and went to the second floor, on which is the factory of Montag Brothers, and went into Frank's private office and just at that time Frank said, "My God, there is a package of cord in Corinthian Hall," and Frank then put Conley into the metal room, where he left, locking Conley out and asked Conley if he could write, and Conley stated that Frank frightened him. Frank then dictated the letters heretofore referred to. Frank took out of the desk a roll of greenbacks and told him, "Here is $200," but after a while requested the money be left in the safe.

One witness testified she saw some negro in the metal room over the elevator, at the side of the elevator in the gloom. Another witness testified that he saw Conley, a woman, who was unimpeached, made affidavit that Conley had never left the office through newspaper report, she saw that Conley claimed he met Frank at 1:30 on the corner of Forsyth and Nelson streets on the 26th day of April 1913. Both sides were satisfied that no one of the two in close conversation at that place on that date, between 10 and 2 o'clock.

Frank's Character.

Frank put his character in issue and the state introduced ten witnesses to impeach Frank's character, some of whom were factory employees, who unfavorably impressed the jury. Another witness testified that Frank had improperly gone into the dressing room of the girls. Seven witnesses who answered on direct examination that Frank's reputation for peaceableness was bad, were not cross-examined on the subject of the girls, nor was the subject of comment before the jury.

The above states very briefly the gist of the facts in the case, and the manner in which the state claimed would confirm Frank's statement when taken in its entirety.

GERMAN ANSWER TO UNITED STATES

Being Considered by the Berlin Foreign Office Experts—Kaiser to Pass on the Reply.

Berlin, June 21.—(Via London, June 22, 1:25 a. m.)—Foreign office experts have commenced consideration of the German answer to the American note concerning submarine warfare, and the first draft presumably would be finished by the end of the week. The reply will be submitted to Emperor William at headquarters after it is threshed out between the departments concerned. It probably will not be ready for transmission before the middle, or the end of next week.

No clear indication of the probable nature of the note is obtainable. From the emphasis naval writers continue to lay on the alleged British practice of flying neutral flags and encouraging merchantmen to attack submarines and the impossibility of submarines to observe the regulations governing visitation and search under these conditions, it might be anticipated that this argument would be the kernel of the reply. But as the foreign office there seems to be an impression that this point will appear only as a subordinate part of the reply, if at all, and that an attempt will be made to give a definite answer to President Wilson's requests, one way or another.

Alleged Armament of Lusitania.

The alleged armament of the Lusitania probably will not figure prominently in the note. Considerable testimony has been assembled regarding the presence of guns aboard the Lusitania, but it all refers to voyages prior to the one on which the Lusitania was sunk, some after war began.

A German sailor named Emil Grabe deposes in an affidavit published here that he sailed for four years on British ships including the Lusitania and the Mauretania. He says that he made three trips on the Lusitania and that she, like the Mauretania, carried five or six 12-centimeter guns—two on her after deck, two amidships and one or two forward. Grabe testified that he personally watched naval reservists in the crew of the Lusitania exercising with these guns.

Higher business influences continue to be exerted in favor of a peaceful settlement with the United States. A number of industrial and commercial leaders have appeared in Berlin during the last few days to use their influence personally to this end.

No further details regarding the manner of the destruction of Captain Otto Weddigen's submarine, the U-29, are obtainable here. The admiralty says that all the information in its possession was contained in its announcement of last Friday, that the under-water boat had been rammed and sunk by a tank steamer after the tanker had been ordered to stop.

PROTEST TO BRITAIN ABOUT AMERICAN FLAG.

Washington, June 21.—Further representations are to be made to Great Britain by the United States on misuse of the American flag by British merchant ships. State department officials today indicated that these representations would be included in the new note to Great Britain—now being prepared—relating to interruptions to neutral commerce.

The note on foreign office, it was declared, had been advised from time to time of several complaints that British steamers had displayed the American flag, but the subject now will be dealt with generally. Just when the communication will be sent has not been determined and is dependent somewhat on progress of negotiations with Germany relating to submarine warfare.

Germany's recent claim that the submarine U-29 was rammed and sunk by a British steamer flying the Swedish flag, it is declared, has not been officially called to the attention of the United States, but there is no attempt to deny that misuse of neutral flags by enemies of Germany might tend to complicate the issue between Washington and the imperial government on regulations of submarine activities.

No intimations have reached the state department as to when Germany's reply to the recent American note on submarine warfare will be received. It is believed the reply cannot be expected for a week or more.

HORROR EXPRESSED BY POPE BENEDICT

try, which we love, saved the suffering of war.

Suggestion of Tears.

There was a suggestion of tears in the eyes of the pontiff as he said this. The interpreter, in translating, mentioned the effect of the war on the holy see—whether the pope was free and whether, in the interest of guarantees, his holiness could exercise freely and completely his mission in the world.

The pope replied that there was no need of appealing that the interests of the holy see had been considered, and added: "The state of war puts these interests in danger. We, at the present time, are in an uncertain situation. I must recognize that the Italian government is giving us some proofs of its good intentions. The relations are improved, but conditions are as yet not to our entire satisfaction. For example, could they not let me keep my guards intact? I need to guarantee the material security of my person and of the artistic treasures which surround me. They took twenty of my guards, several officers and others whom I cannot readily replace. The noble guards were mobilized, but that amounted to little besides the grave inconvenience of not being able to communicate with my faithful."

That Was Too Dangerous.

"The government offered the free use of cipher to the representatives of the powers accredited to us, but under the control and responsibility of the holy see. That would be dangerous, for I might have been accused of indiscretions touching military matters. I refused the offer.

"I was promised freedom of correspondence unconnected with the cipher, but my secretary of state brought me this morning a letter from the patriarch of Venice with the seals broken. At the tribunal of penitence, which deals only with private affairs concerning the faithful who submit to us cases of individual conscience, several letters have been received opened.

"We no longer hear anything save the sound of the guns. Reports with nations enemy to Italy are suppressed. The representatives accredited to us have had to leave Rome. Our guarantees and our means are much weakened. We have had in the present government, but we tremble to see ourselves exposed to the uncertainties of public life in Italy.

Rome is in Ferment.

"Rome is a furnace in perpetual ferment. Would you say it were absurd in these last days to fear a day of revolution? What will tomorrow bring; how would the people receive defeat; how would they behave in victory?

"Every moment of this people—the most impressionable of the earth—has its reflex here. And we feel ourselves less protected today.

"Would you say it were absurd why we oppose with all our force the rupture of Italian neutrality?"

The pope closed his eyes and seemed to dream an instant. Then he said in deep tones of nature as if to God:

"Does your holiness expect to take any initiative to promote peace?"

To this the pope replied: "The hour does not seem to me to have come. I should not act save with the fullest knowledge, lest I weaken the moral authority which is a gift of God and which I must employ to bring peace among the nations. But I shall seek the opportunity. I shall seize the first hand outstretched."

"SAW OFF" CHARGED IN MANITOBA POLITICS

Winnipeg, Manitoba, June 21.—A sensation developed with the opening of the royal commission today when C. P. Fullerton, K. C., who said he represented fourteen private conservative members of the legislature, presented a request that the scope of the commission be widened to permit them to produce proof that a "saw off" had been arranged in connection with the resignation of Premier Roblin and others.

Fullerton said it was charged that several months ago an agreement was entered into between the Roblin government and the opposition whereby the government was to pay to the opposition $50,000 on the understanding that all election petitions would be dropped.

It was part of the understanding that the royal commission would be dropped as far as the Roblin government was concerned.

Fullerton said it was alleged that $25,000 of the $50,000 agreement had already been paid over and that the other $25,000 was to be paid at the conclusion of the royal commission.

The chief justice said it would be impossible to proceed until the powers of the commission were extended. This would have to come through Ottawa. Counsel for another jurisdiction the case of Frederick Brown, a negro resisting extradition proceedings from Ontario to South Carolina to answer to a homicide charge. Brown contended that as a negro he could not get a fair trial in South Carolina.

JUST PLAIN STEALING AT THE NAVAL ACADEMY

"Star Man" Accused by Ensign Graham of Pulling Off Lots of Things.

Annapolis, Md., June 21.—Testimony tending to show that for at least a year Naval academy examination papers and midshipmen's ratings on examinations had been stolen were given today before the court of inquiry investigating the "Cribbing" scandal.

Ensign Ivan M. Graham, who recently graduated, related a conversation he had last week with Midshipman J. E. Waddell, who he said told him that he (Waddell) knew of lots of things "pulled off" by Ralph McK. Nelson, of New York, a "star" man of the first class and one of the seven midshipmen recommended for dismissal by the superintendent, Fullam.

Nelson on one occasion had asked Waddell, according to the story Graham said he was told, how to get in a window of the steam buildings and secure papers and examinations. At another time he said Nelson showed him advance examination ratings. Later Waddell told Graham, Ensign Leonard R. Adams, the class president, in regard to making the guilty parties resign. He said Adams took up the matter, but the accused men refused to resign.

Ensign E. B. Hough, who was made counsel for the accused after court had begun its investigation, was further impeaching Graham's testimony. Graham also mentioned three more of his classmates, Ensigns Overeach, King and Wilson, as having had dealings with Nelson.

Midshipman John B. Hefferan testified as to the report at the academy that Nelson had been getting examination papers through the whole year. Counsel for the defendants brought out that not only had there been personal ill-will between Graham and Nelson, but that serious disagreements had arisen between the first and second class during the past year.

TEUTONS DRAWING NET ABOUT LEMBERG

vanced to Zolkiew, about 18 miles north of Lemberg, and south of Lemberg to the Skemierek rivulet. The Russians, however, still hold a line everywhere are being attacked.

"Near Tikolaswow and Zydaczow the enemy is standing on the Dniester.

"The troops of the army of General Pflanzer have repulsed strong Russian attacks and have beat back of losses to the enemy southwest of Potok Zloty, near Zale. Szczyky, and on the Bessarabian frontier. Otherwise the situation is unchanged."

PROGRESS CLAIMED BY THE FRENCH.

Paris, June 21.—Tonight's war office communication said:

"North of Arras the situation is unchanged. We have received still the ground conquered. Local infantry actions have not modified the situation. The artillery combat continued.

"Our aviation squadrons effectively bombarded the aviation parks of the enemy, setting fire to four hangars and damaging three machines and one captive balloon.

"On the western border of the Argonne in Germans Sunday night delivered a violent attack, for which preparations had been made by an intense bombardment with asphyxiating projectiles. Our advance line was bent at certain points, two companies being buried in the overturned trenches.

"An immediate counter attack enabled us to retake the entire extent of our initial positions. The struggle was particularly spirited.

"On the heights of the Meuse, in the sector of the Calonne trench, after having repulsed counter attacks by the enemy, we enlarged today our gains of yesterday. The first attack gained only slight progress, and we enabled us to carry new trenches east of Marfaycourt occupied on Sunday. Our gain has been conserved, as were the preceding gains.

"In the region of our reconnoitering parties, keeping in contact with the enemy, we have made progress east and Ordrexon and found them unoccupied.

"In Alsace our progress has continued. We gained in night reconnoitering engagements. After having taken the cemetery of Mattzerad we captured the station, and then attacked the village, the defense of which was very hot fight. We have reached the outlets south of that locality, and have pushed our line to the edge of the forest of Reichsackerkopf, to the direction of Myerhof.

"During the combats we took some prisoners, bringing the total since yesterday up to more than 200.

"Between the Lauch and the Fecht river the enemy attempted an attack on our positions at Hechingerkopf, but was completely repulsed."

The statement issued in the afternoon follows:

"North of Arras we made further progress in a counter-attack, and we are occupying several trenches and drawing near to the northwest side of the village.

"There was an artillery engagement which did not quiet night near Souppiere, west of Peronne. An evening attack was stopped short.

"On the heights of the Meuse, in the sector of the Calonne trenches, we maintained all our gains in spite of a violent counter attack.

"In Lorraine, near Reillon, we have followed up our advantages. The entire first line of the enemy had been occupied by us along a front of 1,500 yards. At the end of the day a strong enemy column attempted to counter attack, but was dispersed, and the reconnoitering parties have reached the vicinity of Charelles, the enemy having abandoned this ground. All the German trenches occupied by us were found full of bodies. We took about twenty prisoners.

"In the vicinity of Mount Bonhomme, in Upper Alsace, we have gained the eastern spur of Mount Calvary, made progress in the neighboring lands and reached the approaches to the village of Bonhomme.

"We continued to make progress in the valley of the Fecht, and we have gone beyond the village of Wasserberg. To the southeast hand-to-hand fighting continues. Here we have gained and taken 150 prisoners, among whom are four commissioned officers and 6 under-officers."

KAISER WATCHED BESKID BATTLE.

Berlin, June 21.—(Via London.)—Emperor William, it was announced officially today, was present at the battle of Beskid for possession of the Grodek line, west of Lemberg.

MORE PROGRESS BY TEUTONS.

Berlin, June 21.—(Via London.)—A further success in the Austro-German drive at Lemberg was announced today by the war office. The announcement says the region of Rawa Ruska, 32 miles northwest of Lemberg, has been captured from the Russians.

The text of the communication follows:

"Western:

"North of Arras our antagonists rescued themselves chiefly with the fire of artillery. An infantry attack north of Souchez was repulsed by us. West of Soissons a partial night attack by the French against our positions west of Moulin-Sus-Toutvent resulted in failure.

"On the western border of the Argonne we opened the attack. The Wurttemberger and the Saxon Landsturm took several lines of defense with extreme vitality, behind each over a front of two kilometers (a mile and one-fifth), and inflicted heavy losses on the French. During the unsuccessful counter attack by the French the prisoners and booty taken in this fighting amounted to six officers and 623 men, three machine guns and three mine throwers.

"In the Meuse hills the French directed strong attacks last evening against our positions in the trenches west of Les Eparges, but at a point west of the high road their onslaught broke down under our fire. East of the high road, however, the enemy penetrated into a portion of our positions, but they have been partly driven out again. Seventy prisoners remained in our hands.

"East of Luneville we withdrew in the face of superior forces. Our advance posts were pushed forward by way of Gondrenton to the main positions north of Flainval.

"In the Vosges attacks of the enemy in the valley of the Fecht and south of this position were repulsed with sanguinary losses. To avoid unnecessary losses we executed systematically during the night the village of Metzeral, which had been reduced to a heap of ruins by the French artillery.

"Eastern:

"Northwest of Shavli and west of the upper Dubysa several Russian attacks, carried out in part by strong forces, failed.

"Southeastern:

"The armies under General Mackensen, fighting for Lemberg and Zolkiew, have captured Rawa Ruska, which is in our hands.

"East of Rawa Ruska the Russians were attacked yesterday by German troops and driven back."

OPTIMISM FELT BY AUSTRIANS.

Austrian Headquarters, June 21.—(Via London.)—A feeling of distinct optimism prevails here regarding the outlook for the Austro-German allies in the forthcoming "third battle of Lemberg." The Russians have been losing ground steadily in the seven days' fighting across Galicia, and in spite of the repeated arrivals of reinforcements they have held any of the various positions taken.

The Russians' chance of making a stand on the Gnila Lipa river, reached the San, with Przemysl as a point of support, but the weakened half court repaired fortress was reduced and retaken speedily. With the arrival of the army of the Grodek line, which constitutes the first outer line of the defenses of Lemberg, the issue of the struggle begins which, seen from the Austro-German side, augurs promisingly for the attacking army.

The Russians now seem in immediate danger of having their left flank turned before the great battle fairly begins. The Austrian army, under Archduke Joseph Ferdinand, has been pushing the Russians northward on both sides of the San and after the past few days, being well within Russian territory to the east. Hence General Mackensen's army, while working around north of Lemberg, needs fear no counter flanking attack. From the north the Grodek line consists of a number of small lakes loosely strung together by the little River Wereszyca, which is excellently adapted for defensive purposes. Therefore, although the Austrian forces already are reported to have captured the western part of the little town of Grodek, the allies hardly will depend rather on driving a wedge through the Russian line around the headwaters of the Wereszyca to gain positions north of Lemberg.

General Mackensen, in executing this plan, already has gained a foothold east of the Grodek line and threatens to cut off the Russian right at Lemberg. Meanwhile General von Boehm-Ermolli, commanding the Austrian army on General Mackensen's right, is keeping the Russians busy on the lower Gnila Lipa and the Zlota Lipa and will attempt to advance across the stream at opportunity offers.

South of Lemberg the Russians still hold strong terrain on the right bank of the Dneister, but have been unable to prevent General Linsingen from pushing his army across the Lower Dneister, notwithstanding the fact that they have been heavily reinforced and have made desperate efforts to check the Austro-German advance.

On the whole the situation looks still less hopeful for the Russians.

TEUTON EFFORT NOT SUCCESSFUL.

Petrograd, June 21.—(Via London.)—The Austro-German attempt to force a way to Lemberg from the lines north and south of Grodek, in the battle for Lemberg, apparently has not yet been successful.

Regarding the approaching crisis in the Galician campaign, The Bourse Gazette says:

"If in spite of the continued German reinforcements in Galicia the Austrian forces us to choose between retaining Lemberg and the Galician bulkhead for our operations, it is possible we shall have to make a sentimental sacrifice, and abandon the Galician capital."

PRECARIOUS FOR RUSSIANS.

Berlin, June 21.—(Via London.)—The rapidity of the Austro-German successes excites astonishment here. It can be believed that the Russians would check the allies' advance for some days on the Gnila Lipa river, according to the assured today recorded results far exceeding the calculations of the most optimistic observers.

Special dispatches from the front describe the situation as follows: "Coming from Grodek and the Russian resistance on the Gnila Lipa river, as also on mouth of the Wereszyca. Air scouts report that the Russians have fallen back on their last line of defense protecting Lemberg, which is nine miles from the Gnila Lipa.

The situation at Lemberg is evidently precipitating. The general von Mackensen today seized the railway between Lemberg and Rawa Ruska, the main line of the northward. This, it is considered, gives the Russians the alternative of waiting for speedy evacuation or of trying to hold the city, with the risk of being enveloped by Von Mackensen's army sweeping around southeastward and forming a junction with General Linsingen's forces.

Grand Duke Nicholas, Russian commander-in-chief, apparently has begun to realize the threatening dangers, for he has ordered the removal of all Russian forces from the south bank of the Dniester. Military opinion here is that he cannot extricate the huge armies without heavy losses.

The Lokal Anzeiger's military expert declares that the victory in Galicia is complete and of enormous advantage. He says there is little prospect of the Russian troops west of Lemberg longer offering serious resistance.

SAMOAN ISLE RAVAGED BY PLAGUE OF WORMS

Pago Pago, American Samoa, May 29. (By Mail via San Francisco, June 21.)—A plague of worms, which has left the half grown crop of taro, has renewed disease in Manua, one of the islands of the group in the Pacific. The United States gunboat Princeton has brought many women and children in from the stricken districts and has cared for others.

The taro crop, largest of the tuber-ricane, would have been harvested in August, but it was to have been the island's food supply.

Dr. Edward Graham Parker, United States naval surgeon, has found the worms in their fight against the worms.

Food furnished by the navy department and the American Red Cross has been distributed.

PERJURY IS CHARGED TO GERMAN RESERVIST

New York, June 21.—Gustav Stahl, the German reservist who was indicted on a charge of perjury a week ago by a federal grand jury, entered a plea of not guilty when arraigned in the United States district court here today. The perjury charge is based on an affidavit in which Stahl is alleged to have sworn that he saw four guns on the Lusitania when she left this port on April 30.

The trial of the case was set for July 12 and in default of $10,000 bail the defendant was remanded to the Tombs prison.

FRANCE NEGOTIATING FOR AMERICAN LOAN

New York, June 21.—Negotiations are in progress by the French people to a favorable conclusion within the next twenty-four months for an important loan in this country to assist the French government in the purchase of war munitions here, according to The Evening Post.

The Italians now are encountering stronger and better organized resistance. The Austrian defenses are numerous and excellently prepared. In many cases they are cut into the rock. At other points deceptive false trenches have been constructed.

ITALIANS REPULSED, AUSTRIANS CLAIM.

Vienna, June 21.—(Via London.)—The Austrian official report of today's following in regard to the Italian war theater:

"Our brave troops have repulsed two attacks near Prosa. The Italian officer with a white flag and a bugler appeared before our front to order a message from the commander of his brigade, as they were without authority both were taken prisoner.

"In the district northwest of Kerm to the south of Karfreit, the enemy was repulsed from a position on the ridge. In fighting detachments of the Dobrecsin Hussars distinguished themselves. Our heavy artillery fire destroyed the fortifications of the mountain fighting on the Carinthian frontier. The attack by the enemy in the district east of Tarvis, as usual, was unsuccessful.

"On the Italian frontier district there have been no important events. The fire of the Italian artillery against our fortifications is not very successful.

"On June 19 a torpedo boat successfully bombarded the tank and harbor buildings at Monopal. The railway station at Bari and Brindisi also were damaged by the bombardment of our naval forces.

"There have been no events in the southeastern war theater."

AUSTRIAN GREAT GUNS BETTER THAN GERMAN

Tremendous Execution Done by the Austro-Hungarian Weapon at Tarnow.

Tarnow, Austrian Galicia.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—The German 42-centimeter mortars, with which Liege was battered into submission, are not the only guns that have been as effective as the Austro-Hungarian weapons of this same caliber, two of which were used against the Russian troops in Tarnow in the great May battle of the West Galicia. They have left a few, but unmistakable, signs of their work. Whole streets demolished houses and big craters in Tarnow and the range of from five to eight miles. The shells are falling in the city at the time it was occupied as a Russian headquarters caused the Russian general and his staff to abandon their comfortable quarters in Tarnow. Many Representatives Offer For Speaker Pro Tem.'s Place

With the arrival on Monday of a large number of the members of the legislature, which meets Wednesday morning, the principal development of interest was prospects of a lively race for speaker pro tem. of the house.

The candidates, announced and probable, so far are Representative E. E. Stewart of Coffee county, Representative D. B. Bullard of Campbell county, and Representative Robert Lesueur of Crawford county.

All of these men were members of the last house and have many friends. Each is confident of election. As a matter of fact, the field seems to be before them, none having yet perfected a strong organization.

Candidates for the speakership, W. H. Burwell, of Hancock, and J. E. Sheppard, of Sumter, opened their headquarters in the Kimball house on Monday and got down to the business of vote-landing.

G. Ogden Persons, of Forsyth, senator from the twenty-second district, also arrived in Atlanta on Monday and opened his headquarters in the Kimball house for his race for the presidency of the senate. There seems no doubt at all but that Senator Persons will secure the presidency of the senate without difficulty. He has a large number of friends throughout the state who will be glad to see him thus honored.

The race for the speakership took on aspects slightly more interesting last night on account of conflicting claims from the Sheppard and Burwell headquarters.

Mr. Sheppard's headquarters issued a statement which claimed for Mr. Sheppard a possible 128 votes with a positive 103.

The total vote of the house is 189, and but 94 votes are required to elect. The Burwell headquarters claim for their candidate 123 votes pledged in black and white. In regard to the method of forming the rules committee, which is an issue of the race, it was stated at Mr. Burwell's headquarters last night that "the fallacy of electing the rules committee has been exploded."

On the other hand Mr. Sheppard's supporters declare that Mr. Sheppard's stand for the election of the rules committee, instead of appointing it, is "drawing him much strength from among the more thoughtful representatives."

Congressman Webb to Speak At Prohi Gathering Tuesday

For the purpose of discussing the liquor situation in Georgia and considering the prohibition bill which will be shortly placed before the legislature the state prohibition convention will be called together this morning at 10 o'clock in the Baptist Tabernacle.

This convention, it is believed by those closest in touch with the situation, will be one of the most fruitful ones ever held in the state. It will be attended by large numbers from all sections of Georgia as well as by notable prohibition orators from other states.

The morning session will be presided over by J. Z. Foster, Marietta. W. S. Witham will be in the chair in the afternoon, and Hooper Alexander during the evening.

The committee on resolutions, one of the most important to be appointed during the convention, will report during the afternoon, just preceding addresses by Mrs. T. E. Patterson, Griffin, president of the Georgia Woman's Christian Temperance union, and ex-Chief Justice S. D. Weakley, of Alabama. The personnel of the resolutions committee will be composed entirely of lawyers and it is rumored that Judge W. R. Hammond will be its chairman.

It is expected that the bill prepared for the legislature will be read early in the afternoon for adoption by the convention. It is said to be a most drastic one without a "leak" or a joker in it.

At the morning session there will be reports from over the state, besides a stirring address by Dr. R. R. Kime. Dr. R. R. Hardman, Commerce, and Congressman Edwin Y. Webb, North Carolina, joint author of the Webb-Kenyon bill, will speak during the evening.

Mrs. A. Cunyas will sing during the convention. Ladies will serve lunch at the tabernacle for those who desire it.

Congressman Webb reaches Atlanta Tuesday evening from the east and Judge Weakley from the west. Both will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Witham.

Government Title Upheld.

Washington, June 21.—The title of the United States to 5,000 acres of timber land in Clay county, North Carolina, contested by the Hiawassee Lumber company, was upheld today by the supreme court. A lower court had held the government's claim invalid because of irregularities of registration.

SIEGEL BEGINS TERM IN NEW YORK PRISON

Geneseo, N. Y., June 21.—Henry Siegel, former owner of department stores and banker of New York, convicted last November of a misdemeanor and sentenced to ten months imprisonment and to pay a fine of $1,000, unless he made restitution to his creditors, started for Rochester today to enter the Monroe county penitentiary.

At his hearing before Justice Clark this morning he waived stay of execution of sentence. The hearing lasted but three minutes, counsel for Siegel merely waiving stay of execution without comment.

Siegel's decision to accept sentence was reached, it is said, when he became convinced that his offer to make immediate payment of $150,000 to the depositors would be opposed by the prosecution as unsatisfactory to a majority of the stockholders.

Siegel said he had made diligent efforts to raise funds, but that "hard times" had been against him. He declared that after he had served his sentence he was determined to re-engage in business and pay his creditors in full.

REARGUMENT ORDERED ON HARVESTER CASE

Believed That United States Supreme Court Stands Close on the Suit.

Washington, June 21.—The International Harvester case, foremost of all the government's anti-trust prosecutions now in the supreme court, was reopened today for a new argument at the fall term beginning in October.

Neither the government nor the company had asked a rehearing, the court's action was a complete surprise to attorneys for both sides and was announced without explanation.

From precedent and practice it was inferred in some quarters that the court stands very close on the case and desires reargument for its own benefit, or that in view of the prime importance of the case to the interpretation of the laws which in new lights, a reargument has been ordered in the hope of getting a unanimous decision. That was the situation in the Standard Oil litigation.

Close observers of the court's procedure and the government's anti-trust proceedings point out, too, that a reargument in the harvester suit may have been ordered because of the many questions involved which have not been raised in trust cases heretofore, and because many of them come within the purview of the recently enacted trade commission and Clayton trust laws.

The case, which is regarded as of first importance, particularly in view of its similarity to the Steel case, which the government recently lost in the lower courts, must also be decided before the fall and probably the winter months. A decision has anxiously been awaited in business and financial circles for months.

Attorney General Gregory is known to have expressed the view recently that the usefulness of the Sherman law in the future regulation of business depends largely upon the attitude of the supreme court in the Harvester case. Pending a decision, it was said tonight, the department of justice probably will not institute any important anti-trust cases.

The government policy in the Steel "Trust" suit has been announced, and Mr. Gregory, in conformity with his announcement, will make the customary appeal from the decision of the lower court.

TURNED COUNTERFEITER WHEN HE LOST HIS JOB

After pleading in the United States commissioner's court that he had taken up the arts of the counterfeiter when spitefully discharged from a position at his discharge from a job in Atlanta, A. Bradberry, of Gwinnett county, 18 years old, who was arrested by Sergeant Bullard while in the act of making a spurious nickel at 89½ Piedmont avenue, was bound over by Commissioner Calhoun to the federal grand jury Monday. In addition to 127 pieces of spurious coin the officers exhibited a complete counterfeiting outfit, which they said had been taken from Bradberry's possession.

Bradberry's father was present at the hearing and requested that the charges against his son be investigated immediately so that the defendant could commence serving his sentence as soon as possible.

MACON WAREHOUSE TO BE ENLARGED

During the First Year Over 100,000 Bales of Cotton Handled—Old Officers Re-elected.

Macon, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—Following the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Macon Bonded Warehouse today, announcement was made that the capacity of the warehouse is to be practically doubled before the next crop comes in.

Over 100,000 bales of cotton were handled by the warehouse this year, which was its first.

All of the old officers of the warehouse company were re-elected.

Life Savers for Bibb Bathers.

Following receipt of instructions today from Captain William S. Lumbert, in Atlanta, who is in charge of the work of the International Life Saving department for Georgia and Florida, Captain F. Beimas, stationed here, placed the matter of the enforcement of the state law, which requires that each resort which has a lake where open bathing is permitted, shall have a competent life saver in the water at all times, before the county commissioners. It is expected that the county will see that the law is enforced.

The action is the result of two drownings which have already occurred at outing clubs in this county. The state law also requires that every person who goes in the water shall register before doing so. There are five clubs around Macon which have lakes for bathing purposes. Only one employs a life saver.

Aged Macon Lady Dies.

Mrs. Lena Nagel, 89 years of age, and at one time one of the best known school teachers in Macon, died here today at the home of her daughter, Miss Sarah Hull, on Second street. Many of the older residents of Macon were her pupils.

Whitfield County Elusive Jailbird Makes Third Escape

Dalton, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—Sheriff Charley Connally has just received from Webb City, Mo., where he went for Arthur Painter, who is wanted here for burglary, jail-breaking and several misdemeanor charges. The officers in the Missouri city captured Painter and notified the officers here. Sheriff Connally secured papers of requisition and left here last Monday night for the prisoner. Upon his arrival in Webb City he made arrangements for an early return, but some time during the night Painter was liberated from prison by some sympathising friends, who were also in custody, but allowed the privileges of trusties. Every effort was made to recapture Painter, but after a long and unsuccessful search the Georgia officer was forced to return without his man.

The prisoners who aided and abetted Painter in making his escape will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law by the Missouri officials. Sheriff Connally was reimbursed by the Missouri people for the expenses paid for the arrest and other fees in that connection.

Painter escaped from jail several months ago, was captured and escaped from the officer and his last achievement qualifies him to distinction for elusiveness.

EXPECT STORMY SESSION OF THE POLICE BOARD

The adjourned meeting of the police board tonight promises to be one of the busiest and stormiest in its history, the board dividing its attention between the trial of Detective Chief Newport Lanford, on charges preferred by a uniform sergeant of police, and the adoption, or rejection, of the recent probe committee's report that criticised Chief Beavers and many policies of the police department.

Chief Lanford's trial on charges by Station Sergeant S. H. Roberts that he (Lanford) had cursed him over the telephone, and that there exists little harmony between the detective and police departments as a result of the alleged "feeling" that the detective chief holds for some of the uniformed police will in all probability take up most of the time of the board.

Mr. Ragsdale is now in the west employed by the allies now engaged in the European war and is purchasing horses from the western dealers.

PLANS FOR NEW SCHOOL ACCEPTED BY THE BOARD

Plans for the Meador Goldsmith school have been accepted by the board of education and work will commence immediately on this structure. It will be in readiness for occupancy this fall. Superintendent Landrum and Architects Battle and Barilli spent most of Monday going over the lot which has been donated the city by J. W. Goldsmith. The lot approximately measures 250 by 300 feet, fronts on Baltetta, and is bounded upon the other three sides by Rice, Church and Cobb streets.

The lot offers many opportunities for park effects and the city park department will be asked to beautify the location for the benefit of the neighborhood. Request will be made of the construction department to furnish a special sewer for the building, as it will set too far below the level of Marietta street for that sewer to be made use of.

MOISE DELEON DIES MONDAY MORNING; WAS LOST FOR YEAR

Moise DeLeon, aged 45, an Atlanta contractor, died at his residence, 111 East North avenue, Monday morning. Mr. DeLeon had been in Atlanta for the past two years. One year prior to that time he was living at 744 Piedmont avenue, and while en route to visit a brother, E. W. DeLeon, in Chicago, disappeared and was not heard of for a year.

Mr. DeLeon's disappearance took place on August 7, 1912, and for a year relatives searched all parts of the world to locate him. He was finally discovered in an Australian hospital, where he had landed after wanderings caused by a complete loss of memory.

He was brought back to Atlanta, where his health was temporarily restored.

He is survived by his wife and three small children.

Attorney Is Fined By Court of Appeals On Contempt Charge

Dean E. Ryman, an Atlanta attorney, was fined $50 for contempt of court by the state court of appeals Monday afternoon. He was given ten days in which to pay the fine.

The charge of contempt against Ryman grew out of statements he made in a motion for a rehearing of one of his cases which he recently filed with the court of appeals.

Ryman lost a case in the municipal court of Atlanta and appealed to the state court of appeals, where he also lost. He then made a motion for rehearing, in which he made the statement that the court of appeals had probably not read the record in his case.

Upon this assumption Ryman made the following deduction:

"If they had done so it is impossible to contemplate they could have written so palpable and untruthful misstatement of facts."

Upon this Ryman was compelled to answer a citation for contempt, with the foregoing result." Attorney General Grice presented the court's case.

ACCUSED BLIND TIGER KILLS WITNESS' FATHER

Quitman, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—Alex Johnson, an old negro, was shot and instantly killed by Joe Traylor, another negro, here yesterday because Johnson's son had given evidence against Traylor in a blind tiger case.

Traylor went to the Johnson home to shoot up the family, and the old man went out to remonstrate with him. Traylor made his escape.

Berry School Student Drowns While Bathing In Oostanaula River

Rome, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—While swimming in the Oostanaula river, near Rome, Hugh Sewell, of Leoma, Tenn., a student of the Berry school, was drowned.

The young man had gone in bathing with a number of other boys, but was not a good swimmer, got beyond his depth and sank before they could reach him. His companions dived and recovered his body about twenty minutes after he had gone under.

Physicians were called and restorative measures applied, but were unable to restore him to life. The body was taken to Leoma, and was accompanied by Principal Atkins, of the school, and Warner Sewell, a brother.

The students of the school met in a memorial service and are planning to contribute to a memorial fund toward helping some other needy youth.

BROWN RESIGNS PLACE ON THE HEALTH BOARD

I. N. Brown, representative from the ninth ward on the board of health, submitted his resignation to general council Monday and it was adopted. Mr. Brown assumed office on January 1 of this year and had three years to serve.

In rush of other business Monday general council failed to hold an election to choose a successor to L. C. Green, who recently resigned as member of the park commission from the fourth ward. Mr. Green will be elected to the vacancy since he has the indorsement of the fourth ward delegation in general council.

SANDERS BRYAN'S PROBABLE SLAYER BADLY INJURED

Waycross, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—A negro thought to be the murderer of Sanders Bryan, a white farmer killed Saturday in Tift county, was found today near the Atlantic Coast Line track at Waresboro, northwest of Waycross, his right leg broken and seriously bruised about his body. In his semi-conscious condition he has made several conflicting statements, in one of them claiming his name to be James Wright.

How he was injured is a mystery. No report has been received of a train striking anyone in this district today. The negro is in a local hospital.

Auto Riders Fired Upon By Rider of Shy Mule In Whitfield County

Dalton, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—Hubert Judd and some friends were fired upon Sunday afternoon by Joseph F. Gilbert, a prominent farmer of this county, while the former were taking an automobile ride. Gilbert was riding a mule, which he claims was shy or jealous of his rival, the auto, and when the machine bore down upon him he commanded the driver to stop, and, drawing his revolver, fired upon them. No one was hurt; and the rider and mule and the occupants proceeded upon the way. No action was taken in the matter, but it is highly probable that the matter will be investigated at the July term of court. Considerable indignation at the occurrence is expressed by the automobile owners, who claim that Judd was clearly within his right, and had observed all the legal requirements, and had practically stopped his machine when the shot was fired.

Sues Landlord for $2,000.

Rome, Ga., June 21.—(Special.)—Mrs. Mary Adams has filed suit for $2,000 damages on account of injuries alleged to have been received when she fell down a stairway in the residence rented from H. J. Klassing. She has brought suit against her landlord, claiming that she was permanently disabled. The suit will be heard at the next term of the city court.

THE BRIGHTENING OUTLOOK.

The note of Optimism is national now. Coming from the great centers in hourly touch with the vast business interests of the world, it meets with hearty response in all sections contributing to that business; cities, towns, villages—everywhere, the feeling is optimistic of a bright business future, a new dawn of Prosperity.

This evidence of better business conditions, now and to come, is the keynote of commerce the country over.

It is well expressed in the current circular of Barruch Brothers, of New York, leading private bankers, as follows:

"The greater part of the civilized world is destroying itself accumulating fabulous debts. Devastation is everywhere, and we are waiting on the sidelines. Awaiting the days of reconstruction, which are sure to come. Our factories are now working overtime to meet the world's demands. The foodstuffs from our plethoric storehouses are levied upon to the limit of ships to carry the tons of plenty away. Bumper crops in sight and bumper demands for the entire output of our industries can only spell 'prosperity.' Money is seeking permanent investment. Standard securities are comparatively cheap. Railroads must soon show better earnings because of big crops and big business.

"Do not let war clouds obscure your vision."

That is the cheering word of world-business, speaking with authority.

Take it for a text; be a preacher of Prosperity!

ADVERTISING AS A SCIENCE.

With reference to the eleventh annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, in Chicago, from June 20 to 24, The Hartford Courant, noting the many changes that have come over business since the establishment of that newspaper, says that none is more marked than the change in advertising.

This, of course, is the general experience, from the great metropolitan dailies to the weekly press in all progressive communities. Advertising, as conducted now, is altogether on a scientific plan. Worked out on that basis, it has world-wide readers, and readers mean results.

Comparing advertising in its infancy with the high state of the efficiency now. The Courant says that from being an accident of established business it is the chief aid and support of general business, and an art, too:

"Turn back to an oldtime paper and you will find dull, unattractive announcements, changed by some reckless advertisers as often as twice a year. Their sole value was fundamentally that of limited, namely they did 'keep the name before the public,' that was all. They had no attracting power in them. Today advertising in many cases not merely keeps the name prominent. It is what is advertised that draws as truly as who advertises it. Knowing how to present attractions has grown into professional work.

"It is now "the art of advertising"—the having what the people want, and knowing how to tell of it convincingly. The genius of the world's artists of pen and brush is enlisted by advertisers to illustrate their announcements in the daily newspapers and monthly magazines—to set forth in attractive form the wares they have to offer, and business testimony the world over is of rich results that follow honest, intelligent advertising.

Advertising is now a faithful reflection of the business life of the land and to keep pace with that life, to be informed of its needs and progress, people scan the advertising columns as the best index of growth and prosperity of the business world.

THE SUBMARINE BLOCKADE.

Whether it is the inefficiency of the submarine as a blockader, or the fact that Germany hasn't enough of them to do the work, it is true that very little headway has so far been made in the destruction of British commerce, so little, in fact, that England can scarcely be considered under blockade.

Figures just published show that British exports for May were $198,000,000, while in January, before the submarine warfare was begun they were only $141,000,000, and in August of last year the total was only $121,000,000. Imports for May were $358,000,000 or $63,000,000 more than for May, 1914, when peace prevailed. Thus in May, when the submarine warfare had become most active, England still did an immense aggregate export and import business of $556,000,000.

There is much to bear out the statement recently attributed to a German submarine officer to the effect that the submarine warfare on merchantmen is "useless." It sounds extensive enough under big headlines in the news dispatches, but the number of vessels sunk by submarines is insignificant as compared with the tremendous fleet that makes its way in and out of English ports every month.

The submarine has done its work well in the attacks upon war vessels, and in this respect England, comparatively speaking, has paid heavier penalty than that exacted of her commerce. In the submarine warfare on merchantmen, Germany has accomplished nothing much outside of offending a number of neutral friendly nations—ourselves among them. It is even seriously to be questioned whether she has in any measure terrorized the British people by this undersea campaign. There have been no noticeable evidences of it.

The question naturally arises, therefore, as to whether Germany is not paying a price for her attempted retaliation far and away in excess of the value of her achievement. Is the result, which is comparatively insignificant, worth the throwing away of the friendship of neutral nations?

It is this aspect of the situation which may result in modifying the views of Berlin to the extent of returning a conciliatory and satisfactory answer to President Wilson's last note dealing with the case of the Lusitania. If Germany could maintain anything like an even half-way effective blockade, it might be a different matter. But the present situation is nothing more nor less than "paying dearly for a whistle."

WAR PRICES FOR FOOD.

Extraordinary advances in the prices of food in England, with the war as an excuse, have brought about talk of legislation for the protection of the public, somewhat after the manner of what has already been done in Germany, where the increase has been considerably less, notwithstanding the fact that Germany is presumed to be cut off from traffic relations with the outside world.

Recent investigations by the British Board of Trade showed that in London the advance on five important articles of food in general use was 51 per cent, while the increase upon the same articles in Berlin was only 33.5 per cent, and in Vienna it was 74.4 per cent. Both economic pressure and currency depreciation have been greater in Austria, which is said to account for the excessive advance there.

But the difference in the increased prices in England and Germany is even greater than appears, for England has firmly maintained her monetary standard, while Germany has issued paper money extensively and placed severe penalties upon refusal to accept it. If reduced to the same standard, therefore, the German advance in prices would be still less; for Germany has controlled food prices by law. She took hold of the food situation early in the war, with the result that the advance has been comparatively slight in view of circumstances.

There is no apparent reason for the extraordinary advance in England other than the opportunity which has been offered for money-making. Maritime insurance rates are, naturally, some higher on account of the submarine menace, but there are no apparent items of added expense to justify an increase of 51 per cent in the cost of staple foods. Many English merchants are reported as extracting extraordinary profits from the war situation, and the probabilities are that the greater part of the money is being made in the handling of food products.

Democratic England naturally hesitates at any legislation that seeks to abridge the right of the individual in putting whatever price he wishes on what he offers for sale. And it is human nature to acquire whenever the opportunity for it offers. The probability is that unless something is done to bring about a modification of the situation it will get worse instead of better as the war goes on. Public sentiment has had little or no effect upon food prices, and the indications are that it will not unless it should force the enactment of a war measure, already an apparent possibility, against exorbitant prices.

BOYS IN THE BATTLE FRONT.

The picture of boys of 15 doing service with the land and naval forces of Europe is a pathetic one. This does not refer to the Boy Scout service of all the countries at war, but to more boys who fill the places of men in the ranks.

Writing in London Opinion of this feature of warfare as it affects England, James Douglas says:

"My heart is raked with pity for the clear-eyed, clean-skinned lads who have gone and are going to the slaughter with life fresh and sweet upon their lips. They are butchered in the beauty of their boyhood. I feel murderous when I see the name of a midshipman of fifteen in the roll of honor. The pity of it! The shame of it! The horror of it! It is hard to sleep with the sobs of Rachel mourning for her children in one's ears. There never was such lamentation in the world. If we were able to imagine it we should all go mad with rage and grief and remorse."

It is said that the same conditions exist in France, Germany and Austria—this "waste of youth" is widespread.

They go willingly enough—are glad to go, in the spirit of patriotism and boyish eagerness for adventure; and they fill battle-pits with the others, and War's levy on the young life of the lands continues.

All will be losers in a war that demands such sacrifices.

No matter when congress meets, chautauqua statesmen can't complain that they "never had a chance."

The Sleepy Country.

When the friendly fish ain't bitin' in the waters cool and deep
The river sends this message: "Time to sleep—time to sleep!"
'Tis such a life of toiling where they sow and where they reap,
The very winds'll tell you: "Time to sleep—time to sleep!"

The weather's ceaseless story goes to that drowsy tune;
The noonday echoes ring it, and then, with day's farewells,
The dream-sweet breezes bring it from distant twilight hills.

But the world is not for dreamers, in the shadow and the beam,
Yet all the world is thrilling with the music of a dream;
But winds and waves still murmur, where the flowers their vigils keep:
"We have golden dreams to give you: Time to sleep—time to sleep!"

MODERATELY GOOD.

A load of virtue will never hurt you, if modestly it's borne; the saintly relic who's too angelic for week days, makes us mourn. The person good who by a chostic or joke is deeply vexed, the turgid person who'd still disbursin' the precept and the text, is dull and dreary, he makes us weary, we hate to see him come; oh, gent so pious, please don't come nigh us—your creed is too blamed glum! The saint who mumbles, when someone stumbles, "That man's forever lost;" is but a fellow with streak of yellow, his words are all a frost. Not what we're saying, ra we ay straying adown this tinkerty globe, not words or phrases, though loud as blazes, will gain us harp and robe. It's what we're doing while we're pursuing our course with other skates, that will be counted when we have mounted the ladder to the Gates. A drink of water to tramps who totter with weakness in the sun will help us better than text and letter of sermons by the ton. So let each action give satisfaction, let words be few and wise, and, after dying, we'll all go flying and whooping through the skies.

The Holland Letter

One of the leading lawyers of the United States, who was a member of the party which was invited by George Westinghouse to visit Niagara Falls in 1892 and to inspect the beginning of the work which, two or three years later, was perfected and became the great electric plant on the Niagara banks, said to Mr. Westinghouse, in the hearing of others, that as for himself he was no more than what other lawyers are—a critic, an analyzer and in no sense a constructive force. That was the prevailing impression at the time this remark was made, but since then lawyers have achieved great success in the executive management along modern lines of some of the larger corporations. That is plainly illustrated in the career of Judge E. H. Gary, who passed from the practice of law into executive association, first with the Federal Steel company and later with the United States Steel corporation; so, also, it was demonstrated by the late president of the Reading, George F. Baer, and it is now being daily proved by the management of the Harriman railroad system by Judge Lovett, first a lawyer and then a railroad executive.

A few days ago the president of the American Sugar Refining company, Charles H. Allen, entitled to be called governor—for he was civil governor of Puerto Rico at one time—resigned as president of the American Sugar Refining company. Governor Allen did not withdraw from association with the company, but he remains as director. Some time in the winter Earl D. Babst was elected vice president of the sugar company and the inference was strong that an executive district that he would in the course of a few months become president of this company. When it was announced that Governor Allen had resigned, the inference of last winter that he would be succeeded by Mr. Babst was strengthened. Judge Allen, then, is another illustration of the error made twenty-three years ago by a great lawyer when he said that the lawyer is a critic and an analyzer and is not a constructive force. When Mr. Babst began practicing law in Detroit he probably had not the slightest suspicion that the day would come when he would abandon practice and become associated first with one and later with another of the greatest American business corporations. This was the experience also of Judge A. W. Green, who was so successful in his legal practice in Chicago as to be able to count confidently upon an annual income of $50,000 a year. He was persuaded by Marshall Field, H. H. Porter and some others in Chicago to abandon a practice that yielded him so much money so yearly as this to undertake the executive direction of the newly organized National Biscuit company. With Judge Green, later, became associated Mr. Babst, and his career reports which tell of the extraordinarily successful achievements of this corporation tell also of the success of two men who had been trained as lawyers and who abandoned practice to take up executive management of a business corporation.

Marshall Field's Choice.

In the estate of George F. Pullman were certain securities representing a baking corporation. The executors of the estate believed that instead of accepting these securities they could be utilized in building up a very great corporation whose output came from baking ovens. When this organization had progressed far enough to make it essential that the executive officers be chosen Mr. Field pointed to Judge Green, saying, "There is the man." It was with some reluctance that Judge Green gave up professional practice and he was only persuaded to do so by the appeals made to him by Mr. Field, Mr. Porter and others. With him became associated, a little later, Earl D. Babst, and these two men worked out with wonderful success a problem which involved the rapid and satisfactory distribution of the products of the company and also the highest scientific accuracy in the making of these products. Not even in the laboratory of the Standard Oil company has there been more constant and diligent research than that carried on by men of science under the direction of Judge Green and Mr. Babst.

The sugar company, when Henry O. Havemeyer was president and when there was intense competition with Arbuckle Brothers, made a special study of distribution, and that led to the perfecting of the cartel system. So, also Mr. Babst, as an executive of the biscuit company, perfected a like system, greatly to the delight of Marshall Field and others. Moreover, he made it clear that he possessed remarkable qualifications for salesmanship so that he who a few years earlier was a fairly successful practitioner at the bar began to be spoken of among the leaders in American business life as one especially qualified to point out the way by which the great business carried on by great corporations could be made more economical. The ideas respecting distribution and the perfecting of the cartel system which is the pasteboard packages or boxes in which the commodities are packed—are the same whether applied to a baking corporation or to a sugar company. And it is the presumption that under Mr. Babst there will be advance in the mastery of the science of speedy satisfactory distribution of the commodities of the company.

A Multimillionaire.

The recent probating of the will of DeWitt Clinton Blair, in Belvidere, N. J., has led to an estimate commonly made in the financial district that his estate is not less than $50,000,000 and is likely to be more. Yet Mr. Blair was one of those who are rarely mentioned in lists of American multimillionaires, although his father, the late John I. Blair, was known to have accumulated so great a fortune as to justify naming him among those who possessed the largest fortunes gained by Americans.

Mr. Blair, with his sons, who are the executors and trustees of the estate, has been for years numbered among those who have the strongest confidence in the future of the United States. It was due to the financial support which they gave to great undertakings regarding which almost all capital was timid that these propositions were at last worked out and achieved great success.

Several years before the death of the late Abram S. Hewitt, he advised friends who lived in Baltimore that it would be a safe and profitable investment for them to buy at the price offered, about $4,000,000, the Clinchfield coal district. Mr. Hewitt said that if he were a younger man he would himself buy that property. Baltimore capital, however, was timid, chiefly because there was no adequate transportation from the Clinchfield district to the seacoast. Later, Norman B. Ream, T. Jefferson Coolidge, of Boston, and the Blair brothers, in association with Thomas F. Ryan, secured the property, although many men of capital thought they were venturing greatly when they did so. Furthermore, with the cordial co-operation of DeWitt C. Blair, his sons and others, they undertook to finance the construction of a railroad running in a line southeasterly from the Clinchfield district to Spartanburg, S. C., where communication could be made with a railroad having terminal at Charleston. All that the highest science of railroad construction could involve was adopted in the building of this road, which was completed only about two years ago. In addition to furnishing cheap transportation facilities from the Clinchfield district, it also opens a new gateway from the Ohio valley to sea. This one transaction illustrates the courage of Mr. Blair and of his sons and it is only one of several in which these qualities have displayed. HOLLAND.

Baby Dines in Jury Room.

While the law is so stern that it refuses a man admission to the jury room with his while she is doing jury duty, there is nothing to prevent a baby going to its mother, at least that is how the law was interpreted in the court of Judge William Huneke when baby Margaret Hackett went to the courthouse for her dinner.

SHOULD USE SAVINGS IN PENSIONS FOR EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS

Editor Constitution: The announcement of the pension commissioner that less money will be asked and required by Georgia to support the pensioners for the next two years than that given this year is significant and marks an important stage in the finances of our state.

The people of Georgia, through their legislature, have held two purposes high in the past: First, the expression of appreciation and veneration for the soldiers of the sixties and their widows by giving to them substantial pensions to make more comfortable and happy their old days; second, to provide schools and educational institutions for the boys and girls, young men and young women of our state, so that they may serve the state in peace or war in the future as nobly as our Georgia soldiers, now rapidly being called higher up, served the state in the sixties.

Georgia has been liberal indeed to the old soldiers and their widows, as she has dispensed more in pensions than nearly all the other southern states. She has paid eight millions probably twenty or twenty-five million dollars, and that with a bountiful hand and a loving heart. Hardly anything asked for the old soldiers has been withheld, but to the sons and daughters and grandsons and granddaughters of the old soldiers, the state has not been so liberal in providing educational advantages, so that these youths might make soldiers to serve Georgia as their fathers and grandfathers have done. Georgia must be said to have been up to the present time rather parsimonious with the educational institutions of our state for our boys and girls. But the state has no doubt done well considering the condition of her treasury and the sacred needs of the old veterans.

Decrease in Pensions.

Pensions will now decrease. The pension commissioner announces that instead of appropriating $1,075,000 as made for this year, an appropriation for $1,000,000 will be made for next year and for year after next $925,000. Our pension appropriation will run down and down until $100,000 per year for the next ten or fifteen years, when all of its beneficiaries will have gone to higher rewards.

Let the state, therefore, turn this bounty, not longer needed by the pensioners, to the education of our young men and young women in the university and the branches, the state normal schools, the Georgia School of Technology, the North Georgia Agricultural school, the State Normal school, the Georgia Normal and Industrial school, the Georgia Medical college, the University summer school, and the Industrial School for Colored Youths, and the eleven district agricultural schools.

Each of these institutions is said to be in serious need of better support and to withhold that support will be a great wrong to the young men and women of our state and will hold the state back in her development. These schools have not received any increase in the last three or four years, though each one is increasing in attendance and the demands of educational progress and increased equipment are pressing very rapidly.

Helping Educational Institutions.

By this plan the Georgia legislature can this summer in addition to the present appropriations divide at least $75,000 among these institutions for next year, and for the year after an additional $75,000, and each year in succession make a like increase. This can be done by applying the decrease of the pension fund to the educational institutions, and thereby not increase the burdens of the tax-payers. In a few years the income and support of the university and all of her branches can be doubled and in a few more years the amount can be doubled again, making the support of the university and her branches by 1925 or 1930 four times as great as the support now is without adding one dollar to the appropriations for the state. We can do that by giving the pension money we have bestowed on the old soldiers when they no longer need it to the education of young men and young women who are to be soldiers in peace as in war.

The state will thereby have commenced itself as a business method of meeting the growing demands for the education of our young men and young women. Our state has been slow in performing this duty, but the university and all of her branches are operated on less than one-half million dollars. Practically every one of the northern states beats this. The University of Wisconsin receives one and one-half million dollars annually, or three times as much as all of our educational institutions.

The effect of this policy is seen in the smaller proportion of boys and girls who are receiving higher education. In proportion to population Georgia has one boy or one girl in college to nine in Ohio, twelve in New York, and thirteen in Connecticut. Surely we need more institutions of learning as Ohio, New York and Connecticut, or any other state. In order to get our young men and young women so trained we must provide the educational institutions and we can provide these institutions only by providing the financial support.

Very truly yours,
A. H. MOORE.

DELIGHTS OF CAMPING OUT.

(From Leslie's.)

The camper-out who is a real lover of nature will enjoy roughing it in woods or on lake or seashore, but he should first make sure that its physical conditions make it safe for him to undertake the venture. When in camp, every care should be taken to avoid needless exposures and to observe the plain rules of health. Outfits should be selected and modes of living in camp should be planned under advice of some experienced person, and he will do well if such a one could be a member of the camp company. A camping party should not be large; a few congenial companions are better than a crowd of unassimilated people. Properly prepared for and wisely carried out, a brief sojourn in tent or cabin in the wilds should build up the vigor of the woman in bodily and mental health and vigor and supply a fund of pleasant recollections and good spirits for months succeeding. Not a few hard workers by various fields of labor attribute their staying power and success to the invigorating effects of their annual hark back to wild nature. To those requiring a complete change of surroundings this plan commends itself as a means beyond compare of restoring worn-out nerves and jaded minds.

THE CATBIRD.

(From The Indianapolis News.)

The cry which has come from the backyard, apparently from the cherry tree, where the fruit on the sunny side of the tree is being ripened upon, was the doleful cry of a lost kitten—there was no doubt about it. The sympathy of the children of the household was at once aroused. They went out to find the poor little kitten. When found it was to have a generous supply of milk. They had already pleaded, with success, that they should keep the kitty. As they approached the cherry tree a bird flew out and jauntily perched on a nearby fence. And this was the winged wag that had deceived them. He is here this early summer in unusually large numbers and his kittenish imitations may be heard from the trees and bushes of our gardens at almost any time of day, though for choice he and two-fourths have no less, of a dark slate color, with crown and tail black and under tail coverts chestnut. He is a fine singer after he finishes his cat calls. This bird, which breeds in the north, winters in Florida and farther south. It is a great feeder upon insects. Its technical name is galeoscoptes carolinensis. Galeoscoptes is from the Greek gale, a weasel, and skoptes, a mocker.

NOSTAGALIA.

(From The Detroit News.)

German sailors on steamships which are held at various New York piers, some of them, gone mad. Idleness and homesickness are the causes, hospital authorities say.

Homesickness finds strange victims. Army surgeons know that sometimes it kills. Often it is the man without a regular home who is most subject to nostagalia. This disturbance of nerve and body settles down upon the phlegmatic, the burly, the thick-skinned. It takes them under sunny skies amid the earth's best loveliness and they moan for dirty streets where they played in childhood.

Idleness breeds homesickness and active diversion cures it. It is akin to melancholia and comes in mysterious ways. Probably it arises from the biological impulse intended to anchor man in one place long enough for him to take root. Its opposing instinct is the wanderlust.

Explorers have confessed that the worst homesickness they have known was in the first few hours and days of their return. In familiar surroundings the marks of time's inexorable progress were painfully apparent. Changes, great and large, forced home by reminders of the precious past. Some have turned in despondent revulsions to take up their roamings again.

THE BEGINNING OF KHAKI.

(John P. Duglop in a Letter to The Scientific American.)

In your correspondence column of April 3 the question is raised as to when the khaki dye was first used for soldiers' uniforms and the writer dates it back to 1877. Now, I wore khaki-colored uniform in 1858 during the Indian mutiny war, being then in the East India company's service. Our khaki was worn by us at that time had been white drill, but it was found to be unfit for the rough work of the campaign; it showed the dirt too much. So orders were given to have it dyed a brown color called khaki, used by the natives. This was at Ahmednuggur, Bombay presidency. The dye was very inferior, did not stand washing well, but it served not only the original purpose, but also that of making our soldiers less conspicuous to the enemy.

P. P. JOHN GUTENBERG.

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

John Gutenberg was born within sight of the Rhine at Mainz in 1410. His parents were noble, but in politics. They were expelled from Mainz during a change of administration in 1420, and went to Strasburg.

This was a great misfortune as Florence made when she gave Dante twenty-four hours in which to get out of town. Gutenberg became the father of printing, the greatest of all modern powers. But he never went back to Mainz and let the home folks brag about their achievements. He was invited to come back and live, but refrained and contented himself with getting citizens of Mainz pinched for debt whenever he found them in Strasburg.

Gutenberg early applied himself to the task of getting wealthy quickly. He was one of the early promoters and was always getting a little capital together to promote a new invention which would make millions. He lost a lot of money on an improved looking glass designed to make a face look less like a sack of oats than the old kind did. Finally we hear of him borrowing 50 guilden to form a company for the purpose of printing books with type.

This was as foolish a proposition as airship companies were in 1880, and Gutenberg received the hoarse hoot wherever he went. For ten years he wandered around southern Germany borrowing small amounts here and there, and putting them into the business, and in 1455 he bound up his first copy of the Gutenberg Bible, and put the first edition on sale.

This produced an enormous sensation, and it has been growing ever since. In a very few years, print shops were running all over Europe and even thousand monks who wrote fine hands were hunting new jobs. But they didn't do Gutenberg any good. His shop lost money. His creditors took it away from him and he died in 1468, poor and almost forgotten.

An improved looking glass designed to make a face look less like a sack of oats than the old kind did.

One copy of the Gutenberg Bible is worth enough to make a man happy beyond the dreams of avarice. But it is too late for him to appreciate this. All we can do for him is to erect monuments to the memory of the most useful, get-rich-quick man the world ever had.

HOW CONSTITUTION GOT STORY OF FRANK'S DEPARTURE WHEN GOVERNOR, SHERIFF AND OTHER OFFICIALS COMBINED TO KEEP COMMUTATION SECRET UNTIL MONDAY AFTERNOON

Live Wire Reporters Have Exciting Night, But Win Out Over All Obstacles

Readers of yesterday morning's Constitution, who sat over their rolls and coffee and calmly perused the coldly conservative type that conveyed the news of Leo Frank's commutation, saw in the lines of the story only the usual newspaper routine of an important story served at the breakfast table in the unvaried manner that countless stories have been served since journalism gained recognition as civilization's most indispensable institution.

But the exciting drama that underlaid the Frank story was, perhaps, as intense as the hurried flight of the famous prisoner, spirited from jail under heavy guard and carried upon a journey that placed him just as the sun began to climb into the eastern sky before the portals of the prison in which he is doomed to spend the remainder of his natural years.

The underlying story of the Frank commutation was enacted by the newspaper men who covered it for The Constitution, and, in spite of the elaborate and unshaking effort to keep the action secret from a waiting public, managed by wit, ingenuity and hard labor to do their duty to the reading public whose interest they nightly serve.

THE NEWSPAPER DRAMA.

The newspaper drama was enacted in the dead hours of the night. The main center of activity was the county jail, from which the prisoner had been spirited through a subterranean passage almost beneath the very noses of the newspaper men who had, since nightfall, kept expectant vigil.

But there were other points of interest to the enactment, one of which was the home of Governor John M. Slaton.

Despite the fact that Governor Slaton last Friday had made the announcement that he would render his decision until either Monday or Tuesday, vague, though persistent, rumors prevailed that Frank would be slipped from the jail and carried to Milledgeville before the time set for the executive's verdict.

It was reiterated Sunday afternoon that no decision would be forthcoming until Monday, at least—possibly not until Tuesday morning. The reporter in charge of the Frank story wrote his first edition story to the effect that the governor would probably make his report late Monday afternoon. This ran through the earlier editions.

A confidential tip, however, arose from one of the innumerable secret sources that are perpetually cultivated by the modern newspaper that Frank's sentence had been commuted, and that he would be stolen from the Tower and rushed in an automobile at midnight. The trained newspaper man never overlooks the barest possibility—takes no chances.

FRANK CHATTING WITH VISITORS.

A vigil was instituted at the Tower. The reporter in charge of the story went at 8 o'clock into the interior of the jail to see for himself if Frank was there. The prisoner, in a nervous mood, sat chatting with a dozen visitors. A squad of deputies loafed around the outer corridor of the prison. This, however, was no positive evidence of a proposed journey with a prisoner, as augmented jail staffs had been frequent during the past weeks.

At 10 o'clock, the deputies began to thin out, strolling leisurely away, bidding chummy good-nights. At 10:30, an effort was made to get in touch with Governor Slaton. The butler announced the governor would return not until 11 o'clock. Repeated attempts following that time to get the home or the governor on the phone proved to no avail. Twice the operator declared that the receiver had been removed from the hook, and that it was useless to ring any longer.

From 11 o'clock the atmosphere around the jail was surcharged with an element of foreboding. It is the newspaper man's "hunch," on which he often relies to gain startling success. Strange whisperings among the remaining deputies, and a conversation between Sheriff Mangum and a short, thick-set man, neatly attired and wearing a natty straw hat (afterwards found to be Transfer Guard Patterson), excited a growing suspicion that something was not only coming off, but was due soon.

At 11 o'clock the man assigned by The Constitution to the jail was reenforced by three additional reporters. They had barely reached the prison than the two oaken doors leading to the interior of the prison were suddenly closed for the first time in the recollection of any of the reporters familiar with the jail "run."

WIRES TO JAIL DISCONNECTED.

The suspicions of the newspaper men crystallized into definite conclusion.

Frank was being removed from the Tower!

But how?

The only entrances were the side way and the front door! At least these were all known to the public or the reporters.

An effort was made to telephone The Constitution office to send a man the short distance on the Terminal station. It was futile! The wires to the jail had been disconnected.

One telephone, in accordance with the elaborate system of secrecy, had been put out of commission for the time being.

The jail keeper and his assistant, with the remaining deputies, maintained attitudes of commendable calm; they knew nothing! Soul-stirring entreaties would not urge them to permit a reporter in the interior of the jail in violation of the rule that prohibits visitors after 10 o'clock. The same rule applied to information.

At 11:35 o'clock a high-powered automobile, with a glistening bonnet, the street lamp, and evincing preparedness for a journey, pulled slowly up and opposite side of the street, rolled idly past the jail and stopped in the enclosing shadows near-by. A suit-case sat conspicuously in the tonneau. Two men were in the front seat. This soon received the attention of the reporters.

Was it true that the tip, in all respects, was authentic, and that Frank was waiting behind the oaken doors for a dash for a waiting motor and thence to Milledgeville? A taxi-cab was brought to the jail, and engines kept running in readiness for a dash in pursuit.

HOW SHERIFF ELUDED NEWSPAPER MEN.

A reporter went to reconnoiter the adjoining premises encountered a nightwatchman of an adjacent building. He had seen a group of men, headed by Sheriff Mangum, emerge from one of the networks of alleyways in the rear of the jail, run to a waiting automobile and hurry away up East Hunter street in vicinity of the Terminal station.

The report was hastened to the Terminal station. He arrived in time to find a number of station officials who had seen a group of men, headed by Sheriff Mangum, emerge from the network of alleyways in the rear of the jail, run to a waiting automobile and hurry away up East Hunter street in vicinity of the Terminal station.

The report was hastened to the Terminal station. He arrived in time to find a number of station officials who had seen a group of men, headed by Sheriff Mangum, emerge from the network of alleyways in the rear of the jail, run to a waiting automobile and hurry away up East Hunter street in vicinity of the Terminal station.

A policeman was positive it was Frank. He recognized a number of the deputies who escorted the prisoner to the Terminal.

The Constitution men were sure that Frank was en route to the state prison, but there was no authentic confirmation of it.

Substantiation, at all costs, must be had. Time was fleeing and the hour of going to press approached with inexorable rapidity. One reporter was sent between midnight and 1 o'clock to scour the vicinity of the Terminal station, another to police headquarters, but was left in the jail and a fourth was dispatched to the home of Judge R. E. Patterson, chairman of the prison board, to whom, when reached, stated he knew nothing of the commutation, and that he supposed Frank was sleeping soundly in the Tower.

EVEN MRS. FRANK DID NOT KNOW.

All the members of the prisoner's counsel were asked. None of them knew of the governor's action. Even Mrs. Frank, the prisoner's wife, did not know that Frank had gone. Never in the history of Georgia's prison system had such a perfect system of secrecy been thrown around an action.

That The Constitution penetrated it and served it at your breakfast table at exactly the time you have been furnished news for the past forty-seven historical years, is an epoch that will glow brilliantly in southern journalistic annals.

While the others scurried to varied sources the reporter in charge of the story sped in a taxicab to the country home of the governor on Peachtree road, at Buckhead. The trip was made in less than 15 minutes. The home was reached at 1:15 o'clock. The taxicab rolled up the curving roadway to the very edge of the building, its light lights illuminating the attractive home.

For fifteen minutes the reporter and a companion newspaper man pounded upon the woodwork and sought in vain to arouse the servants to receive admission from the governor. When this proved unavailing the harsh-sounding buzzing of the taxi was resorted to. Its loud noise penetrated the very depths of the surrounding woodland, from which returned resonant echoes. Still no response came from within.

The taxi was rolled to the rear of the building, and its lights again served the figures of the reporter and his companion, thereby eliminating danger of being accidentally shot for burglars, although there was little of the burglar in the fact that the modern burglar works along more noiseless lines than those pursued by the newspaper man.

Still, the story depended upon it and there were no chances to be taken.

BUTLER FINALLY AROUSED.

Creating an alarm with their voices, they eventually succeeded in arousing the butler, who lives in the rear of the home. His response was to send the fact that there were occupants within. Less than a moment later the lights were switched on in an upper veranda, and the large form of the governor, clad in pajamas and holding a rifle in his hands, was disclosed.

"I am a reporter for The Constitution; Leo Frank is supposed to be in his way to Milledgeville. Will you please tell whether or not he has been commuted?"

"I will not speak to you," replied the governor from his lofty position, his voice echoing back from the depths of the woodland vale, and showing an unmistakable resentment of the midnight intrusion.

"But the public wants to know—the entire nation wants to know. Will you please answer 'Yes' or 'No'?"

"I repeat I will not speak to you," he replied.

"But I am sent to find whether or not you have given your verdict. I hate to obtrude at this hour, but there is no alternative, on account of the fact that it is a midnight development."

"I insist all you please—I will not speak to you."

"But, governor, if Frank is now safely on his way to Milledgeville—since no harm can be done by disclosing your action at this time—"

The entreating voice of the newspaper man, bathed in the light of the taxi's lamps on the gravelled surface of the roadway, went up to meet the irate tone of the governor upon the elevated veranda.

"Am I to take it," he continued, "by your refusal to talk that you have acted—"

"You can take nothing for granted—I will not speak to you," came from the governor, who withdrew, thus ending the conversation.

NIGHT WATCHMAN SAW FRANK.

Nearby the jail, to which he returned, he discovered a night watchman who had positively seen Frank, would have sworn it was Frank. This and a deal of other evidence practically dissolved the secrecy of the flight. By the time the paper had started to press, The Constitution's Macon correspondent, who had, by telephone, been put upon the scent of the story, had started to press, that Frank stopped there and had taken an auto for Milledgeville.

Newsboys were summoned and within but little more time than it takes to tell, the story of Frank's journey was being rumbled off by the giant press in the basement.

The squad of reporters, assembled upstairs, mopped beady brows and congratulated each other on the night's incidents.

It was all in a night's work.

Has Been in Stockade So Much He's Known As Official Painter

Fred Cole, an old painter, whose habitual use of intoxicants has made him the official painter at the city stockade, was in the police court again Monday afternoon.

Cole, while drinking, lost his coat. He went to the room of another man and took the first coat he saw. The owner of the coat, I. H. Mines, had Cole arrested.

Cole's sentence was eleven days in the stockade.

"I have just finished painting the stockade building," he remarked, "and now I reckon I will have to paint the stable."

For "Mashing" on Street One-Legged Man Fined $10.75 in Police Court

For speaking to ladies on the street with whom he had no acquaintance and for hitting a young man with a crutch when asked to desist, Mike Day, a one-legged man, was tried in the police court Monday afternoon and fined $10.75.

Lebbens Goldwasser testified that he was with two young ladies at the corner of Marietta and Broad streets Sunday evening when Day walked up, bumped into one of the ladies and said, "Hello, how are you?" When Goldwasser told Day to go away, Day struck him with his crutch.

JUSTICE PROVES SWIFT IN CASE OF CRIMINALS

Within an hour and a half after their arrival in Atlanta in the course of their being transferred from the jurisdiction of the federal court at Rome, Burt Montaine and William Jennings were indicted, tried, sentenced and had their sentences beginning their sentences in the federal prison for breaking into the postoffice at Plainville, Ga., recently.

Upon their arrival at the federal building an indictment was quickly rendered by the federal grand jury. So soon after they pleaded guilty than Judge Newman sentenced them each to two years and a half in the federal prison and a fine of $100.

LOOKING FOR NEGRO DRESSED AS WOMAN

Tom Dickerson, a negro who was to have been hanged Friday for the murder of his wife, broke jail at Opelika, Ala., Monday morning at 2:30 o'clock and what was heard from was on his way to Atlanta dressed in woman's clothes.

The Atlanta police have been notified about the escape and they are looking for a negro dressed as a woman. Dickerson is a bright mulatto and weighs about 150 pounds.

NEGRO ON RAMPAGE SCARED DARKTOWN

Having tanked up on fighting whisky and having no one about on whom he might vent his spleen, Dan Watts, a citizen of Darktown, Sunday afternoon picked up a small dog belonging to a negro woman and killed it in the middle of the street.

The scene so horrified the Darktown citizenry that a policeman was called. Watts was tried in the police court Monday afternoon and fined $15.75.

then followed it with a provision creating a standard based upon the condition existing on January 1, 1866, prior to the adoption of the fifteenth amendment, and eliminated those coming under that standard from the inclusion in the literary test.

The court had difficulty, he said, in finding words to more clearly demonstrate its conviction that this action of the state recreated and perpetuated the very conditions which the fifteenth amendment was intended to destroy than the language used in the amendment.

"It is true," continued the chief justice, "that it contains no express words of an exclusion from the standard which it establishes of any person on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude prohibited by the fifteenth amendment, but the standard itself inherently brings that result into existence since it is based purely upon a period of time before the enactment of the fifteenth amendment and makes that period the controlling and dominant test of the right of suffrage.

15th Amendment Disregarded.

"In other words, we seek in vain for any other basis upon which to sustain any other interpretation but that the plain purpose was to put into operation existing before the fifteenth amendment was adopted and the continuance of that condition during a period of time before, imposed by, in substance and effect, the fifteenth amendment for a period of time after the amendment to make them the basis of the right to vote unless that right was granted as a positive disregard of the fifteenth amendment. And the same result, we are of opinion, is demonstrated by considering whether it is possible to discover any other basis of classification than those fixed other than the purpose above stated.

"We say this because we are unable to discover how, unless the provisions of the fifteenth amendment were considered, the slightest reason was afforded for basing the classification upon a period of time prior to the fifteenth amendment. Certainly it cannot be said that there was any peculiar necromancy in the time named which engender attributes affecting the qualification to vote which would not exist at another and different period unless the fifteenth amendment was in view."

Restriction of Power on States.

The chief justice had prefaced this statement by a development of the argument that the restriction imposed by the fifteenth amendment on the power of the states over suffrage was coincident with the limits of the power itself. He also set forth the principle that while in the true sense the fifteenth amendment gives no "right" or suffrage, it was long ago recognized that in operation its prohibition might measurably have that effect; that is to say, that as the command of the amendment was self-executing and reached without legislative action the conditions of discrimination against which it was aimed, the result might arise that as a consequence of the striking down of such discriminating clause a right of suffrage would be enjoyed by reason of the generic character of the provision which would remain after the discrimination was stricken out.

This was said by way of answer to the argument of attorneys for the election officials that the fifteenth amendment was meaningless because there was no such thing under the American form of government as a "right" to vote.

Sketch of Grandfather Clause.

For more than fifteen years the "grandfather clauses" have been inserted in constitutions of southern states. The most popular form has been to exempt from educational and property tests for voting those who could vote in 1866, 1867 or 1868, thus leaving the tests to apply to those who did not vote at those dates.

The Oklahoma grandfather clause provides "that no person shall be registered as an elector in this state, or be allowed to vote in any election herein, unless he be able to read and write any section of the constitution of the state of Oklahoma, but no person who was, on January 1, 1866, or at any time prior thereto, entitled to vote under any form of government, or who at that time resided in some foreign nation, and no lineal descendent of such person, shall be denied the right to register and vote because of his inability to so read and write sections of such constitution."

The Clause in Maryland.

In Maryland the clause was inserted in laws governing elections in various cities. In 1908, it was inserted in the law governing municipal elections in the city of Annapolis. It authorized the registration as voters of all taxpayers of the city assessed for at least $500; all duly naturalized citizens, all male children of naturalized citizens 21 years of age, and "all citizens, who prior to January 1, 1865, were entitled to vote in the state of Maryland or any other state of the United States at a state election, and the lineal descendents of any person who prior to January 1, 1865, were entitled to vote in the state of Maryland or any other state of the United States at a state election."

Various arguments were advanced to meet the attack that these clauses violated the fifteenth amendment to the constitution providing that "the right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude."

Another line of argument was that the clauses did not "deny" or "abridge" the right of negroes to vote, as forbidden by the fifteenth amendment, but it merely discriminated against them by allowing those not negroes to vote without meeting the qualifications imposed ostensibly upon all.

Effect of Decision on Georgia.

It is not regarded as probable that the ruling of the United States supreme court holding the Oklahoma grandfather clause unconstitutional will effect the corresponding provision of the constitution of Georgia. Such is the opinion ventured last night by prominent authorities in Atlanta, which opinion, of course, is based upon the information contained in the dispatch from Washington.

Senator Hoke Smith, whose first campaign for governor was successfully made upon the grandfather clause issue, last night gave The Constitution the following statement regarding the ruling of the supreme court:

"I could not discuss the decision until I have seen it in form, but it was generally conceded in Washington by those representing both sides of the case that such a ruling would not affect constitutional amendments similar to that of the constitution of the state of Georgia."

CHARGED WITH MURDER OF LECTURER BLACK

One of Men Implicated in Killing of Opponent of Roman Catholic Church Is Freed.

Marshall, Texas, June 21.—Frank O'Leary, one of five Marshall men indicted for the murder of William Black, an anti-Catholic lecturer, here February 3 last, was acquitted in district court here today on an instructed verdict. The state previously had sought dismissal of the case on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence to convict O'Leary. The defense insisted on a formal acquittal by a jury.

State Ordered No Witnesses.

When District Judge H. T. Lyttleton overruled the state's plea for dismissal and order the trial to proceed, the state announced it had no witnesses and no evidence to present. O'Leary was not called upon to make a statement. Judge Lyttleton order the jury, which had been chosen without the usual formalities, to retire and sign a verdict of not guilty. This took one minute. The jury received $2.50 each and court adjourned.

John Copeland, George Ryan, George Tier and Harry Winn are the other men indicted in connection with the killing. The date of their trials has not been set. O'Leary came here today from El Paso, where he has been living since he was released on bond after his indictment. He was not present at the hearing of Black, but came into Black's room after he was killed, according to testimony at the examining trial.

Story of Tragedy.

The night before he was killed, William Black, negro, had delivered a lecture in Marshall, entitled "Romanism, a Menace to Civilization." He was to deliver a second night. Marxsen had been stirred by handbill advertisements of William Black's work. The handbills contained charges, cartoons and alleged oaths of the Knights of Columbus, a Catholic society.

About supper time Black went to his hotel room, where he was joined by other members of his party, Clarence F. Hall, of St. Paul, Minn., and Miss Sadie Black, a young woman whom Black had adopted at her home in Arkansas a few days previously. Three Marshall men, John Rogers, John Copeland and George Ryan, called on the Black party. According to testimony at the examining trials, all three callers were members of the Knights of Columbus. They asked Black not to deliver his second lecture. Black replied he would deliver it. Black and Rogers scuffled. Black was shot near the heart, according to testimony, by one of Rogers' companions.

Opened Fire With Pistol.

Hall, of the Black party, opened fire with a pistol, killing Rogers, and shooting Copeland three times. Several persons rushed through the hotel toward Black's room. Frank O'Leary, a city fireman, claimed he started from the fire engine house, near by, at the sound of the shooting and ran to the hotel, not knowing what was happening.

Indictments were returned by the grand jury charging murder against the following Marshall men: John Copeland, George Ryan, George Tier, Harry Winn and Frank O'Leary.

Public testimony did not develop the circumstances of the alleged connection of Winn and O'Leary with the killing.

Clarence F. Hall, of the Black party, appeared before two grand juries, but was not indicted.

Austrian Prisoners Turn On Their Russ Captors And Make Them Captives

Austrian Headquarters, June 21.—(Via London.)—Details of one of the most audacious achievements of the war—capture of a Russian general, a colonel and almost 400 men by a little squad of Austrian prisoners—has reached here.

The chief actor was Lieutenant von Pindter, commander of a patrol of Landwehr and Uhlans, who was captured by Cossacks after the battle of Tarnow, in May.

The Russian cavalry brigade to which the Cossacks belonged was retreating with Von Pindten and other Austrian prisoners, when it came under fire of Austrian artillery. Von Pindter, it is said, took advantage of the confusion and armed himself and six other prisoners with Russian rifles and ordered the general to surrender, and made him and a colonel and ten other officers and 382 men prisoners, and captured fifteen guns, a number of horses and carts of the transport column.

With the assistance of an Austrian machine gun detachment, which arrived later, Von Pindter, it is asserted, took his prisoners and booty to the rear and turned them over to the corps headquarters.

MANY WONDER IF VITALITAS IS IT

Will It Do What Is Claimed for It, and Are Stories About It True?

Is Vitalitas all that is claimed for it, and are the wonderful stories constantly heard about it true? Such are the questions that sick people throughout much of the civilized world are asking. It is common among those who are ill to feel that Nature has some curative forces hidden somewhere that, if found and properly applied, would restore them to health. Is Vitalitas that something they are asking.

So far the production of Vitalitas has been only sufficient to supply several of the southern states. Throughout Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Mississippi, Tennessee and Alabama thousands of people have been freed from disease and have found health and strength in Vitalitas. It is a combination of mineral chemicals and forces blended within the earth by volcanic action, so chemists assert. It is free of all harmful ingredients and is not unpleasant to take.

Talk with the demonstrator and sample Vitalitas today at Jacobs' Pharmacy, 23 Whitehall street, or write there for information.

"We'll just put him on Sanatogen"

What a happy thought prompted that decision! He wasn't his "old self" at all—and try to mask it as he might, his face showed only too well how poorly he felt. And so when a friend—with conviction born of experience—spoke of Sanatogen, they "put him on Sanatogen."

Sanatogen—combining the tissue-building properties of a FOOD with the invigorating qualities of a TONIC—rejuvenated his appetite, improved his digestion, brought rest to his nerves, made good the over-drafts upon his energies—and little by little brought back that old-time vigor and sprightliness we find in him.

Perhaps you have not yet had this happy thought—perhaps you haven't yet "put him on Sanatogen."

Then simply let us tell you this: Over 21,000 physicians have testified in writing to the value of Sanatogen after having observed its effects in daily practice. So, too, have hundreds of famous men and women whose very names must be convincing—people who know from personal experience the restorative help that Sanatogen gives. It is a verdict that cannot be disputed.

When will you give Sanatogen the opportunity to help him, or her, or you?

Col. Henry Watterson, the famous Editor, writes:

"I feel I owe it to truth to give Mr. Hall a hearty endorsement. I took a thorough trial of Sanatogen and find I have found in most efficacious and beneficial. I do not think I could have recovered my vitality, as I have done, without this Sanatogen operating equally upon the digestive organs and nerve centers."

Barons Rally in Ninth and Win

Edited By Dick Jemison

Barons Rally in Ninth And Beat Crackers 4 to 1; Grimes and Allen Duel

By Carl Taylor.

After pitching superb ball for eight innings, Jim Allen weakened in the ninth round, and the Barons, rushing to the attack, won the opener from the Crackers, 4 to 1.

For eight innings Allen was master of the situation, and although Birmingham had several chances to tie the score, he would always pull out of the hole.

After the initial round, when the Crackers counted their jinx run, the game revolved into a pretty pitchers' duel between Grimes and Allen, with neither twirler having much advantage. Grimes fanned three men, issued free transportation to but one, and allowed but four hits. Allen allowed seven hits, walked three men, and fanned four.

Jinx Run.

It may be a bum hunch, but it seems as if every time the Crackers count a runner in the first inning they invariably beat. Time after time this year they have got a man over in the opening round and lost the game.

Marsh, who took pleasure in robbing Moran of hits the last time he was here, continued his knockout work yesterday and robbed Roy of two more. Both catches were sensational. Marsh had a good day in the field, handling six chances in good style. In the second inning he made a sensational catch of a slow hit by Williams back of third.

Carroll was the only man to get two hits. His single in the first didn't result disastrously, but his single in the ninth scored two, and helped matters along for the Barons. Wallace, who is at present playing third, had the distinction of not having a time at bat charged to him in the box score. Four times he faced Allen. Twice he walked and on the other two occasions he was pinked in the slats.

Eibel Presented Gift.

Hack Eibel was out in a grey uniform, and practiced for a while with the Barons, but did not play.

Just before the game started Manager Smith presented Hack Eibel a handsome silver service, as a wedding present from his teammates.

Eddie McDonald, the Crackers' new third sacker, was out, but did not play. He looked good in practice. Just as soon as the Little Rock claim is disposed of, fans will have a chance of seeing him in action. It is expected that his matter will be settled in the course of a day or so.

For drama, outside of the hurling, the playing of Bisland was the best for the locals. Bisland handled four assists, and one error. Both of his assists were very sensational. His catch of a slow fly back of third by McBride in the third inning, was great. Although he had an error charged against him, it came in the second round, and did not result disastrously.

How They Scored.

Atlanta got away to a one-run lead in the first. Moran singled to center, advanced to second on Williams' sacrifice out, and scored when Mannino beat out a slow roller to second. Roy did some excellent base running on the play.

The game then rocked along until the beginning of the ninth, when Birmingham won. Magee walked and went to second when McBride pasted the pill to left for a bag. Both runners moved up on Wallace's sacrifice. Hale hit a hard grounder too hot for Korfhagen to handle, and Magee counted the tying run. McBride went to third on the play, and Hale to first. Grimes hit a grounder to Bisland, and McBride was out at the plate. Hale went to second, and Grimes was safe at first. Both runners moved up a per on a passed ball. Carroll singled to center, and both men counted. Carroll going to second. Eilam singled and Carroll counted.

The two teams go at it again this afternoon at 3:45.

SID SMITH PLAYING FINE AT SHREVEPORT

Sidney Smith is playing great ball with the Shreveport team, of the Texas league, whom he joined after leaving the Crackers on the present road trip.

The box scores show a couple of hits every day since Sidney joined the club, and as the result the team has begun to show more consistency. Against the league leaders recently he split in a four-game series, and Shreveport in last place.

That Sid saw the joke on him when he was hitting in such hard luck by slamming into double plays when a Cracker, is evident from a paragraph in his letter, which the sporting editor has just received. He says:

"I am certainly hitting that pill—no double plays—all clean slashes—two-baggers a specialty."

Sid extends his best wishes to all his friends in Atlanta. The best wishes of every Atlanta fan goes out to Sid in his work as manager with Shreveport.

The Shreveport Times carried a story Sunday to the effect that Lee Garvin, who was manager of the team prior to Sid, has signed with the Portsmouth team, of the Virginia league.

JEROME TRAVERS BREAKS RECORD AT PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, June 21.—Jerome D. Travers, the open golf champion, today broke the record for the Huntingdon Valley Country club course by three strokes when he completed the second half of the qualifying round for the Lynnewood Hall gold cup in 74. Par for the course.

Travers led a field of 94 golfers with a total of 150 for the 36 holes. In the morning he took 38 strokes going out and 40 coming in.

In the afternoon he went out in 37 and returned in 35. The former record for the eighteen holes was 78.

In establishing the new record, Travers made better than par at four holes in the outward journey and equaled par at seven holes and was better than par on the return in one. His form he displayed apparently insures him a gaining permanent possession of the trophy, as he already has won two legs.

Francis Ouimet failed to tee off today, sending word that he was not in shape to play. Many of the other prominent players invited to participate took part in the qualifying round.

CAMINETTI AND DIGGS GRANTED A REVIEW

Washington, June 21.—Reversing its own action of a week ago, the supreme court today decided to review the conviction of F. Drew Caminetti, of San Francisco, facing prison sentence for violation of the White slave law, and at the same time it agreed to review the conviction of Maury I. Diggs, convicted with Caminetti in the sensational cases which attracted country-wide attention two years ago.

The cases will be the first in which the supreme court has reviewed a white slave law prosecution where it was contended that the law did not apply to prosecutions which failed to show evidence of the element of commercialized vice.

Caminetti, son of the commissioner general of immigration, faced a fine of $1,000 and eighteen months in San Quentin. Diggs, formerly architect for the state of California, was fined $2,000 and sentenced to two years in prison.

Attention was focused on the cases when Oliver J. Lee, United States attorney at San Francisco, resigned and in an open letter to President Wilson charged that political influence was being brought to bear on Attorney General McReynolds to keep the cases from trials. In the controversy which followed Secretary Wilson, of the department of labor, and the immigration commissioners chief figured. President Wilson closed the incident by appointing a special prosecutor.

CAPTAIN DROVE LINER AT GERMAN SUBMARINE

London, June 21.—The Anchor line Cameronia, under charter to the Cunard line, had a narrow escape from a submarine on her voyage from New York to Liverpool, according to Peter Fletcher, of New York, a saloon passenger. The Cameronia arrived Sunday.

Fletcher says that during the run through the Irish sea a submarine came up and that to save his vessel, Captain Kinnard headed the Cameronia straight for the under-water craft, which dived. After passing over the spot where the boat went down without colliding with it, Captain Kinnard changed his course and got away safely.

Fletcher added that the Cameronia's passengers remained cool, though many of them saw the periscope of the submarine.

The Cameronia sailed from New York June 11 for Glasgow by way of Liverpool. She had on board about forty first-class passengers and many in the second cabin.

AD MEN SEND GREETING TO LIFE TERM CONVICT

They Urge Eyting's Release by Arizona Governor—Fraudulent Ads Knocked.

Chicago, June 21.—Reports of steps taken by the state of Illinois to prevent fraudulent advertising were cheered by delegates to the annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, which opened today. Lieutenant Governor O'Hara welcomed the delegates and told of legislation to regulate advertising. The sentiment for "advertising honesty" was the dominant note of the day's proceedings.

A greeting from the advertising men was sent to Louis Victor Eyting, now serving a life sentence in the Arizona penitentiary at Florence. A resolution was adopted urging the parole board of Arizona to give Eyting his liberty. Eyting, it was urged, has, in the eight years he has been within the penitentiary walls of a life sentence, completely rehabilitated himself physically, mentally and morally, and by the intrinsic merit of the advertising work he has sent out from within the prison walls has been a figure in the world of advertising.

A pageant representing the history and science of advertising comprised the program for tonight.

Dr. Charles R. Van Hise, president of the University of Wisconsin, discussed the need of making industry continuous by standardization.

Within the next five years all high schools, business colleges and universities undoubtedly will include advertising as a part of their course, according to the report of Llewellyn E. Pratt, of New York city, chairman of the educational committee.

"There are now twenty-six institutions of higher education offering courses in advertising," Mr. Pratt said in his report. "Of schools and Young Men's Christian associations there are forty-one conducting regular classes in advertising. Frank Leroy Blanchard, of the educational committee, in his report, makes the prediction that before another decade has passed a knowledge of the principles and practices of advertising will be regarded just as essential to the intellectual equipment of a young man who is to follow a business career as a knowledge of mathematics."

GEN. DE WET CONVICTED ON CHARGE OF TREASON

Bloemfontein, Union of South Africa, June 21.—(Via London.)—General Christian De Wet, one of the leaders of the South African rebellion against the British government, today was found guilty of treason on eight counts. Sentence was deferred until tomorrow.

General De Wet was put on trial on June 10 on a charge of high treason. He pleaded not guilty to a charge of high treason, but guilty to a charge of sedition. General De Wet was commander-in-chief of the Free State forces during the Boer war. He was minister for agriculture in the Orange River colony for several years.

PROFESSIONAL VIEWS ON COTTON SITUATION

New York, June 21.—(Special.)—A good demand in Liverpool for immediate delivery was followed by heavy selling on good crop reports received from this side. Our market followed these European advices, closing some 16 points lower with a bearish tone.

The weather in the southwest has cleared and become very hot, a striking rise of temperature to over 100 being reported from many places in Texas. Warm, dry weather must now be looked forward to as a normal condition, and its effect upon the crop will be watched with close attention. At the moment the idea is that such weather will be beneficial, and crop reporters are sending in good crop accounts as they should be the last of June.

July holders were transferring their holdings to the distant months. The feeling of the trade is again bearish.

FACTORY IS WRECKED; GERMANS ARE BLAMED

Windsor, Ontario, June 21.—The overall factory of the Peabody company, limited, located in Walkerville, a suburb, was partially wrecked by a bomb explosion today. The company is said to have just completed an order of 115,000 British uniforms.

Shortly after the explosion in the factory twenty-seven sticks of dynamite were found under the rear of the Windsor armory, attached to a time fuse which had been set for 2:15 a. m., but had burned out. It is said that 200 men slept in the armory last night, and had the dynamite exploded the whole building would have been wrecked.

Horace B. Peabody, head of the overall company, expressed belief that the bomb had been placed "by German sympathizers from Detroit."

Police and military authorities are working together on the case. The damage to the factory is estimated at $5,000 to $10,000.

The authorities are seeking two men and a woman who were seen carrying a suitcase in the vicinity of the armory late last night. The twenty-six sticks of dynamite found under the armory were in a suitcase. The fuse cap had exploded, blowing off the top of the suitcase, and the fact that the main charge did not explode is considered miraculous.

A young man living in Detroit was detained early in the day, but released after an investigation.

NEW HIGH RECORDS IN WAR FAVORITES

Supreme Court, Prior to the Summer Recess, Hands Down Decisions Affecting Industrial and Railroad Stocks.

New York, June 21.—Wall Street's attention was temporarily diverted today from foreign affairs to the United States supreme court, which held its final open session prior to the summer recess. That tribunal handed down a number of decisions of interest to the financial and industrial communities, the most important of which dealt with the relations between the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad and its subsidiary, the coal company. This relationship was declared to be in violation of the law and its effect upon coal carriers is said to be lessened, even though this was not directly discernible on the market for such securities.

Bond market firm, with an advance of four points in international Steel at 87.2-2s, and Baldwin locomotive at 69 3-4. United States Steel, after a heavy opening, soon ran on buying, which comprised many large individual transactions. Prices were well sustained in the final dealings. Metal issues recovered from their lethargy of the previous day.

Cotton Takes Downward Turn 17 to 18 Points in New York

was checked at that level although closing prices were practically the lowest of the day.

The large spot business at Liverpool tended to offset the influence of the decline in futures, while the switching from July to October by some of the local traders to predict that tenders on July contracts here would be comparatively small. The weather map showed generally clear conditions in the south over Sunday, and the rather high temperatures reported in some sections of the southwest and eastern belt appeared to attract comparatively little attention. Exports for the day were 11,443 bales, making 8,057,031 so far this season. Port receipts, 3,353 bales. United States port stocks, 856,755.

Spot cotton quiet; middling uplands 9.60. No sales.

New Orleans Buyers Liquidate.

New Orleans, June 21.—The price of cotton fell 16 to 17 points today, closing at about the lowest. Improvement in weather conditions over the belt, better crop accounts, poor cables and easier spot markets were the chief reasons for the slump. Much liquidation by buyers of the last two weeks was brought about, and offerings of short cotton were liberal.

The market opened at a decline in sympathy with a poor Liverpool market. The weather map, showing the best conditions of weather over the cotton region, increased the disposition to sell. Considerable liquidation on the part of longs who had accumulated holdings on belief in too much rain was brought about, and offerings of short cotton were liberal.

Considerable liquidation on the part of longs who had accumulated holdings on belief in too much rain was brought about, and offerings of short cotton were liberal.

The consensus of private reports was that the crop was doing well under prevailing conditions, and that it was fast being put in a satisfactory state of cultivation.

In the afternoon the decline was widened, following the reduction of local quotations by 12 points and the report that buyers were finding it much easier to trade on the grades they required.

New York, June 21.—Favorable weather and crop advices caused more active selling in the cotton market here today and prices closed barely steady, at a net decline of 17 to 18 points.

Liverpool was lower than due and the local market opened steady at a decline of 4 to 8 points, with active months selling about 5 to 12 points under Saturday's closing figures during the early trading. July was relatively easy under scattering liquidation, but at a difference of about 10 to 12 points under October, there was a good demand for the near months against sales of the later deliveries. This was supposed to be partly in the way of transferring Liverpool straddle accounts to the new crop months, and of shifting hedges against cotton in the local stock from July to October, and the improvement in the demand for July was sufficient to steady the market. Rallies were limited, however, and selling became more general during the afternoon, owing to a bearish report on crop conditions in Texas and north Louisiana from a prominent traveling expert. Active months sold 17 to 18 points net lower, but a better demand was encountered around 9.75 for October and the decline

ALL CHICAGO LIST MAKES DIP MONDAY

New Crop Prospects and Lessened Foreign Inquiry Sends Wheat Below $1 Per Bushel.

Chicago, June 21.—Wheat prices broke to below $1 a bushel today, the first time for the 1915 crop. Slowness of export demand, together with a northward spread of the harvest, did a good deal to force the decline. Prices closed steady at 3¾ to 4¼ under Saturday night's level. Other leading staples, too, showed losses—corn 1⅞@2 3/8 to 2⅝, oats 1⅜@1¼, and provisions 12½ to 30.

Corn suffered in value owing to the break in wheat, and also a result of weather that promised to favor the bears.

Oats ranged lower with other cereals. Selling by packers caused a sag in provisions.

Dry Goods.

New York, June 21.—Cotton goods for the coming fall season are today ordered in quite freely by jobbers. Many inquiries were made by bag manufacturers for osnaburgs and brown sheetings. French buyers were in the market for cotton warp staple dress goods. Cotton yarns steady. Several well-known lines of cotton hosiery were opened for the spring 1916 season.

ATLANTA'S STRIDES FROM DAY TO DAY

Monday's good showing in building strengthened the general belief that June's business will compare most favorably with the corresponding month of last year.

A total aggregate of $17,000 worth of permits were issued, which included a $12,000 residence permit with a number of permits for small frame houses.

J. S. Silcox took a permit for $12,000 for a six-room, two-story frame and brick veneer residence he will build at No. 175 Peachtree circle, on a lot having a 90-foot front on the east side. The residence will have a slate roof. Architect W. O. Canton has designed the plans, and T. J. Flagler was awarded the building contract.

A three-story building, recently completed at 376 Peachtree street, on the east side just south of Currier street, has been leased by Turman & Calhoun for Mahoney & Mauty to the Thompson Motor company for a term of three years. The consideration is not disclosed.

The building occupies a twenty-foot front. It is one of the buildings erected in the Crass subdivision by Ben J. Massell.

A Want Ad Will Generally Bring a Job to a Good Man

A great many employers of men watch the applications made for work through the "Situation Wanted" column of The Constitution want ads. When the right man asks for a job in the right way—in the right place—he's pretty sure to catch the eye of some employer who will recognize the fact that the man who has brains enough to advertise for a position would make a pretty good man for his organization.
Many men who are working, and think themselves capable of doing something better, often secure a BETTER position by advertising in the "Situation Wanted"—holding on to their position until they land a better one. Situation Wanted Ads—

GOVERNMENT WINS OVER COAL ROADS

Contract Annulled as Violation Both of Hepburn Law and the Sherman Measure. Decision Considered Far-Reaching.

Washington, June 21.—A contract by which the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad company was sold, in 1908, the annual output of seven million tons from its anthracite coal mines to the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Coal company, which had been just organized, was annulled today by the supreme court as a violation both of the commodities clause of the Hepburn rate law and of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The decision directed the New Jersey federal district court to enjoin the railroad from transporting coal under the provisions of the contract. The court preserved to the government a right to proceed in a new suit against the railroad to test the railroad's right to purchase coal for sale.

The decision was hailed by government officials as a great victory, likely to have an important bearing on the fight waged for years to break up the so-called "hard coal trust."

Justice Lamar Rendered Decision.

The mere organization of the coal company by the railroad was not disapproved, Justice Lamar, who announced the decision, saying that it was natural, if not necessary, after the passage of the commodities clause law for the road to organize a corporation to supply coal which the public demanded. He said it was not illegal for stockholders of the railroad to take stock in the coal company, but added that where two companies, as one which was organized by another with common stockholders as a rule and officers of one to a large degree officers of the other, made contracts which affected the interest of minority stockholders, or of third persons or of the public, the fact of their unity of management had to be considered in testing the good faith of the transaction.

The contract of 1909, the court pointed out, provided that the railroad company would sell and the coal company buy all the coal mined during the continuance of the contract by the railroad and prevented the coal company from buying from any other source. The justice said that this, in effect, prevented the coal company from becoming a competitor of the railroad in purchasing coal from other mines along the railroad.

Even More Significant.

Justice Lamar said it was even more significant that the railroad company required the coal company to sell to "present railroad customers" at such prices, even at a loss, and to do nothing against the interest of the railroad.

"The railroad," said Justice Lamar, "if it continues in the business of mining, must absolutely disassociate itself from the coal before the transportation begins. It cannot retain the title nor can it sell through an agent. It must leave the buyer free. It cannot call that agent a buyer while, so hampering and restricting such alleged buyer as to make him a puppet subject to the control of the railroad company. If the railroad sells coal at the mouth of the mines to one buyer or to many it must not only part with all interest direct or indirect in the property, but also with all control over it or over those to whom the coal is sold at the mines. It must leave the buyer as free as any other buyer who pays for what he has bought.

RAILWAY IS ENJOINED FROM SELLING LANDS

Washington, June 21.—The supreme court today enjoined the Oregon and California Railroad company from selling the undisposed-of portion of its congressional land grant. Sales of actual settlers in 160-acre tracts at $2.50 an acre are permitted under the decision after congress has had six months in which to enact further legislation on the subject.

The lands involved are valued at more than $30,000,000.

The court refused to forfeit the lands to the government for the company's failure to comply with provisions as to price and settlement, and also denied the application of actual settlers who have gone on the lands without permission of the railroad, and of applicants for entry to have the property declared a trust in their behalf.

The suit was instituted by the government in conformity with a resolution by congress. It dealt only with lands unsold. It appeared in the evidence that some of the land had been sold in 40,000-acre tracts for as much as $7.50 an acre.

Today's decision preserved any right the government may have to bring suit touching land already sold.

The court found that congress, in making the grant, had made no positive provisions as to settlement. Consideration also was given to the argument of the railroad that large portions of the property could not be sold to actual settlers, because the land was not capable of settlement.

For all these reasons the court stated that it was proper that the company should be enjoined from disposing of any of the lands until congress could deal with the new conditions which had arisen since the grant was made.

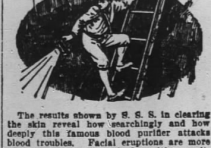
Face Eruptions Have Deep Significance

Often They Indicate Impurities Deep in the Tissues.



The results shown by S. S. S. in clearing the skin reveal how searchingly and how deeply this famous blood purifier attacks blood troubles. Facial eruptions are more often significant of impaired nutrition resulting from faulty elimination of body wastes.

Most people realize this to be true. And yet it is a difficult matter to convince such people they should avoid those harmful drugs such as mercury, iodide of potash, arsenic and so on. S. S. S. gives just as good effect without the destructive results, because it is more searching. It goes deeply into the circulation wherever the blood flows, but it does not remain to clog in any one part. And its effect is complete and thorough as indicated by blood tests. One of the strange things today is that so many people are wedded to the notion that mercury is the one antidote. It is not so. There is in S. S. S. a product of nature that is rated one of the most potent principles known for the complete elimination of blood troubles.

Wherever you go there are people who know this to be true from their own experience, for it has been clearly shown there is one ingredient in S. S. S. as essential to health if the blood be impure as the nourishing elements of the grains, sugars and salts of our daily food. Get a bottle of S. S. S. today of any druggist, but insist upon S. S. S., accept no substitute. And if your case is peculiar or of long standing, write to the Medical Adviser, The Swift Specific Co., 101 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

was submitted to general council for adoption, but was referred to the council school committee.

Donald O. Smith, a grocer, made an unique request of council, claiming that his store had been burglarized four times since March 4, of this year. He claimed that he had lost about $300, and therefore petitioned council to compensate him to that amount. It was referred to the research committee.

A resolution was passed ratifying the action of the Southeastern fair committee in signing a contract for buildings and improvements at Lakewood Park.

No action was taken on the proposed bond issue which had been deferred to Monday, since it was stated that the efficiency committee of citizens now investigating city departments would no doubt have recommendations to make along the line of bonds when they submit their report. The matter may be considered at the adjourned session of general council next Monday.

The report of the tax committee providing for a readjustment of the tax ordinance was also passed up until the adjourned meeting and in the meantime the city clerk will furnish each member of general council with a copy of the new ordinance.

An ordinance was unanimously passed prohibiting the sale of fresh meats on the public streets by wagon or otherwise.

Ice Cream Cones.

Council adopted an ordinance proposed by the tax committee to prohibit the sale of ice cream cones and other unwrapped ice cream on the streets.

Museums of anatomy will also be tabooed in the future following the action of general council in adopting an ordinance prohibiting their operation in the city.

Fortune tellers and phrenologists will also have to pass up Atlanta in the future, since council unanimously adopted an ordinance against their operation here.

An ordinance to prohibit the sale of fireworks by retail in the city was lost. Councilman Jesse W. Wood opposed the ordinance, he said, on the ground that "Atlanta has several hundred unnecessary ordinances already and we need no more.

"If we keep making more laws a citizen cannot step out on the street without violating a law and laying himself liable to arrest and prosecution."

Want Women on Boards.

The Atlanta Woman's Suffrage league filed with general council Monday a petition asking that a charter amendment be gotten giving women the right to serve on the following city boards: Board of education, park board, hospital board, health board and library board.

It was set out in the petition that resolutions directing this course were passed by the league at its regular meeting on Wednesday, May 26, 1915. The petition was referred to the ordinance committee.

Councilman George Freeman, of the third ward, introduced a resolution providing for a charter amendment giving the city the right to set aside $10,000 per year for a sinking fund for the erection of a new cyclorama for the war picture at Grant park. He proses to erect the building when $100,000 shall have been raised.
